• • BRING BACK the

LOVELINESS
dulled
by sun and wind

No longer need you view regretfully—day after day—those tell-tale marks of summer on your skin. With these new Herbal Preparations of FRANCES DENNEY, you can bring back the loveliness dulled by sun and wind.

Herbal Cleansing Cream: Blended with rare and costly herbal extractions and inexpressibly soft and doubly penetrating. Melts quickly with the warmth of the skin, penetrates the pores and gently removes all impurities. $1, $2, $3.50, $6

Herbal Texture Lotion: A thorough liquid cleanser—wonderful for that quick freshening-up in the morning and during the day. Also delightful for using after MISS DENNEY's Herbal Cleansing Cream. It removes oiliness but does not dry the skin $1.50 and $2.50

Herbal Skin Tonic: A delightful Preparation that freshens and invigorates the skin by stimulating active circulation through the facial network. Should be used after cleansing with Herbal Cleansing Cream $1 and $2

Herbal Oil Blend: Very dry skin—and skin exposed to wind and sun—respond gratefully to its soothing unguents. It is a deep-tissue builder—and marvelous for that "worn" look caused by the stress and strain of modern life $5

Herbal Astringent Cream: A soft, fluffy cream with astringent qualities. A thin application protects the skin and serves as a splendid base for powder $2.50

With the perfection of these new Herbal Preparations, MISS DENNEY now offers the most complete system of scientific beauty Treatments ever made available to women. MISS DENNEY will be happy to tell you more about her Methods and Treatments if you will but write to her in Philadelphia.

THE experience and resources of nearly a century bring to this House, from world-wide sources, rare gems of unusually fine quality. x x x These lovely creations are representative of a collection of great importance.

Interesting and beautiful variations of the circle brooch. Left — emeralds with diamonds; centre — a pearl, diamonds, and carved sapphire leaves; right — a charming effect in diamonds. Carved rubies, emeralds and sapphires furnish the color motif for this new bracelet.

A jeweled clip of carved rubies, emeralds, sapphires and diamonds. These new clips serve as brooch, jabot pin or hat ornament. Two sapphire rings — one emerald-cut, the other lozenge shape — of corn-flower blue color, in mountings of modern tendency.

Ingrain is not the trade mark of a product . . . it is the descriptive name of a process . . . that of knitting stockings from silk in which every thread is dyed. Knots are firm and tight. Tension is even. And, despite their exquisite sheer-ness and clarity, ingrain stockings have exceptional wearing qualities.

Ingrain stockings require no special identification. The discriminating woman instantly recognizes their distinctive beauty. Better shops sell them under the trade names listed.

*S*oft and sheer . . . exquisitely clear and free from rings . . . mere wisps of silken loveliness . . . a pair of ingrain stockings. Every evening occasion demands them. Every street costume is enhanced by their beauty. Assure yourself of hosiery in keeping with your wardrobe by specifying ingrain stockings whenever your choice dictates the finest hosiery made.

Back-to-the-city modes have interest in the back...

Under the longer and more formal skirts of the town season appear higher cut operas and lower cut oxfords. And the newest of these, such as the BASQUE from Walk-Over, are fully as interesting from the back as from the front. Of black kidskin with black ribbon lacing through two-eyelets, the BASQUE is backed with...and receives its contrast from...black-and-white rajah lizard. Or in black suede with black calf. Each at $14.50. Our new booklet "Ensemble Footwear" will be sent on request.

Continuing the long, down-sweeping lines of the opera pump... and laced with a ribbon... the BASQUE is, in effect, an adjustable step-in... for once the bow is tied it need not be disturbed.

are longer than they were last season, and wider at the wrist

THEY ARE very simple, too, for Fownes believes that elegance is the result of fine materials and classic lines. And they are made of the softest, most supple suede that could be bought . . . suede with the powdery bloom of velvet . . . sheer luxury to the touch.

They are offered in all the new Fownes colors: Black, of course. But after that, the rich, dark brown called Chocolate, to be worn with the spruce greens, the wine reds, the off-blacks, and with black itself (for brown with black is very new and very smart). The mauve-beige shade, "Blue Fox," to go with autumn furs and tweeds. Then, for the later hours, Honeysuckle (newer than egg-shell) and Peche (to replace the face-powder pinks). While for evening, the fragile, off-white bonbon tints.

These are gloves to please a most particular lady . . . one who well knows this unvarying paradox: that she must select them with almost infinite care, for no other detail of her appearance will be so unobtrusively right or so conspicuously wrong. . . . And gloves by Fownes are a little more subtle, a little more patrician, a little more authentic than the usual gloves. For back of them lies a century and a half of accepted leadership in manufacture and design. . . . If it's a Fownes, that's all you need to know about a glove. THE EXTRA VALUES of Body by Fisher are available to motor car purchasers in every price field, from $565 to $10,000.

This is an economic fact of first importance in the choice of a motor car today. It means that no one need any longer compromise with less than Fisher Body quality, comfort, convenience, safety and durability.

With this satisfying fact in mind, appraise for yourself the extra values of such body features as the Fisher adjustable driver's seat, Protecta-lok door handles, the non-glare vision and ventilating windshield, the richer and costlier upholstery and fittings, and the quieter, more durable wood-and-steel type of Fisher construction. To make certain of these Fisher Body extra values, choose one of the General Motors cars—the only cars with Body by Fisher.

Travels on Swift Wings

Less than ten days ago, in the Rue de la Paix, you were thrilled by a new shade in chiffon hose—a delicate leafy brown. As you reach home you see the identical color reflected in Humming Bird Full Fashioned Hosiery.

This delectable new fall shade, with others, had been selected for us weeks before by Mme. Julie Bolegard, our Paris stylist. Within the past fortnight, the newly imported colors had sped into favor from coast to coast.

Dignity, grace and restraint mark the Fall modes in Humming Bird Full Fashioned Hose—they make no bid for undue attention with their fine weave and conservative French and Pointed Heels.

Styles for all occasions reasonably priced in stores of the better class.

Away at school, a gift can mean so much...

A ... A dressing case, in black or brown goatskin, in pigskin, or in smooth cowhide, equipped with fittings in either black or brown to match the color of the leather.

B ... A writing portfolio, ecru lined, containing an indexed address book and stamp case of leather, a tablet of paper, a pocket for envelopes, a holder for a pen, and a blotter-covered writing surface. Especially acceptable for a young girl, the portfolio may be had in many beautiful colors of ecrase finished leather.

C ... A diary, for five years, equipped with lock and key. It may be had in a wide variety of leathers and colors.

D ... A bill-fold, designed to accommodate the new currency; there is, as well, a pass compartment and a section for cards. A slide fold permits the carrying of any quantity of money without buckling. Other wallets hold bills of either size.

IT IS A SOURCE of gratification to a student at school or college to realize that good friends, perhaps a thousand miles away, still take an interest in him. A word of encouragement ... a note from one who understands ... a gracious remembrance ... to a young man or woman alone for a time, these things may well be priceless.

With many, it has long been the custom to give some gift to those about to leave for school. And among people of taste and judgment, such gifts are frequently of fine leather. A collar case, in ostrich ... a Florentine book-cover ... a desk set or a diary ... there are many lovely things from which they choose.

And in the great majority of cases, their selection is governed by the presence of a tiny golden keystone R. That imprint, placed upon every piece of fine leather manufactured by C. F. Rumpp & Sons, Inc., is an infallible warrant of quality.

It comes with a sense of pleasure to many of these people to reflect that the same House which now supplies the exquisite gifts they buy, has furnished articles of fine leather to their families for several generations. ... This establishment was founded eighty years ago. The fair and honest principles responsible for its growth are still steadfastly upheld by members of the family.

C. F. Rumpp & Sons, Inc., manufacture fine leather articles of every description, excepting luggage. At leather goods and department stores, jewelers, haberdashers and stationers.

CHAMPAGNE LEGS ON A BEER PURSE

We've got to look luxurious this autumn, or we won't fit into the picture. But if we paid as much for our stockings as some misguided people, we'd have a hangover in the charge account that would hurt like darned heels.

Sheer as the drop off a penthouse roof—smooth as a waltz on the best floor in town—cool as the tinkle of cubes in a glass—and the cleverest little liars that ever put their best feet foremost—Rograin Stockings!

They make everybody think you paid dollars more than you did. They make everybody say, "Why—her legs are thinner!" They make the smart young thing at the next table wonder where they came from—and her smart young escort wonder where they're going to, when they leave his line of vision.

It's that inimitable luxuriousness, you get in Rograin Stockings, plus good hard wear, plus excellent shades in the prescribed dull finish for—hold your breath and open your purse—

SMART NEW DULL PATINA

In the New DARKER Shades for Fall

COPYRIGHT, 1930, WINDSOR MILLS, INC.

REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

● This Fall . . Smart Legs are Definitely Dull . . but Dullness for Dullness' Sake often falls flat . . steer clear of Deadly, Flat, Toneless Stockings . . they register zero on every appraising eye.

● Seek the Dull Patina to be found in Windsor Supretwist. It's Dull in that Highlights are eliminated . . but Alluringly Alive in the Aura of Charm it imparts to your skin . . In fact, we were told by a famous Painter of Portraits that the Dull Patina of Windsors is equalled only by the smooth, clear tone of a perfect complexion.

● Clearer..Sheerer..Smoother..one experiences a new pleasure in wearing fine things when putting on Windsors for the first time.

● Paradoxically—Windsors are Sheerer because Stronger . . The Supretwist Process greatly increases the strength of the Silk Thread and at the same time banishes the natural fuzzy ends of silk. By Actual Test Windsors are 11.2% Stronger . . meaning many days additional wear . . doubly desirable when laundering. After each tubbing Windsors really seem fresher and livelier.

● These Irresistible Stockings have yet another virtue to recommend them . . to be found in the Sheer Chiffon Numbers (known in the Stores as No. 48 and No. 45) . . Along the Seam and next to the Hem is an innocent-looking little reinforcement that diffuses the Stress and Strain every time you stretch, run, sit, leap, dance or whatever you do that makes ordinary stockings break out where the Hem joins the Seam.

● This idea is our own little invention..the patent is applied for . . it's called the "Loquet" . . and you can only get it in Windsor Supretwist Stockings—but you can get them at the smarter Shops and Stores everywhere at amazingly reasonable prices . . Windsor Mills, Inc., 389 Fifth Avenue, New York; 2nd and Westmoreland Sts., Philadelphia.

COAT OF BOTANY TWEED

Accomplish a facile air in sportswear and you have the formula for chic. From its great raccoon collar to its slender, semi-fitted lines, this spectator model in tweed expresses the high-spirited freedom of autumn sports days. The new sleeve silhouette and hand-depth pockets are interesting and individual in tailoring. And the basket-weave texture of the monotone tweed by Botany is all-important to the jaunty style.

Shoes that say "We're Going Places"

IF you want to sit around with wallflowers and split infinitives, any shoes will do... but if you expect to go to football games and fraternity dances, take a tip from the most popular girls at college... and dress your feet in Peacock high-arch narrow-heel slippers.

Three stunning Fall models for street, travel or classroom have just been released for inspection and admiration... They're ravishing... You will see them on restless feet at the station... on hurrying feet in the halls... and coquettish feet on the campus. What a temptation to choose all three! And that is just what is being done, because the constant activities of college life make that choice so delightfully practical.

"Southampton", a one-strap of Golden Brown Baby Alligator... as newly arrived as it sounds... with tip, strap, foxing and heel of Prado Brown Calf, offers an excellent interpretation of this season's style edict for broken surfaces in self color. The "Parnella" pump of Basque Brown Kangola, carries the classic leather heel. One striking combination of the "Larchmont" oxford is black Kangola vamp and quarter with trim of black and cream genuine lizard. . . . See them at the Peacock Shoe Shop or Department in your city. Prices Ten to Twenty-Five Dollars.

In 1908, even America's finest automobile had scarcely begun to crowd the horse out of the picture—as the Pierce-Arrow painting below evidences. Twenty-two years later, another artist gives his conception of the same scene, alongside—and the relative importance of today's Pierce-Arrow.

PEOPLE who regard automobiles as accessories to luxurious travel—as distinguished from the great democracy of “motor tourists”—are apt to exercise a nice discrimination in the cars they drive, the places they visit, whom they meet.

It is more than a coincidence that among such people, the well-bred presence of Pierce-Arrow owners is usually to be remarked.

The preference which belongs to Pierce-Arrow is no social whim, but rather a recognition of that patrician quality which has for years been inherent in America's finest motor car.

Today's Pierce-Arrows are endowed with a grace and a modishness, and a luxuriousness of appointment, which the most distinguished designers of Europe must envy—and do, indeed, emulate.

Yet with all their costly hand-wrought perfections, these cars carry no penalty of over-price. At present figures, Pierce-Arrows represent the outstanding values of today's fine car market.

Announcing

the greatest hosiery improvement in a decade

A Perfectly Fitted Heel

Instead of the usual way of knitting and splicing straight down to the bottom of the foot, as shown above, and shaping the heel by boarding and pressing the hosiery, the new Holyoke process provides a knitted "cup" which perfectly fits the heel and prevents creeping or slipping, with its accompanying unpleasantness in feeling and appearance.

No Unsightly Instep Bars

In the ordinary stocking, shown above, the splicing, where the foot joins the leg, is made noticeable by a line across the instep of the stocking. In Holyoke Cinderella Hosiery, the leg and foot are knit in one continuous piece, affording a neat and smoothly finished heel and instep.

No Bunching at the Heel

As the ordinary stocking is knit straight down to the end of the heel, a special stitch is required to avoid raveling. This stitch is heavy enough to form a bunch under the heel. The new process eliminates this stitching and its accompanying unpleasant bunch at this important point.

A more beautiful stocking . . . scientifically built for greater wear and comfort

Into this remarkable new hose, the foot slips as smoothly, as easily, as snugly, as Cinderella's into the legendary glass slipper. Unlike ordinary hosiery, it fits smoothly over the instep and avoids bunching and slipping at the heel or under the foot. Its fairy-like weave of gossamer thinness is strong at all points of wear. Note the accompanying illustrations—see why the new Holyoke Cinderella Hosiery will bring new beauty and greater foot comfort than has ever before been achieved in the history of hosiery manufacture. See why you, too, will be delighted in wearing this hosiery. There are ten of the season's most stylish shades from which to make your choice.

PATENT APPLIED FOR. Infringements will be vigorously prosecuted.

HOLYOKE SILK HOSIERY COMPANY

Mills at Holyoke, Mass., New York Office 358 Fifth Ave.

WITH THE NEW
HOLYOKE CURVE

NOTE the radical improvements afforded by the beautiful Holyoke process of curved knitting, exclusive with Holyoke Cinderella Hosiery. The shaped heel does away with severe strain and makes the stocking fit snugly over the ankle and instep. This radical improvement, now offered for the first time, affords a stocking which really fits the foot—a beautiful stocking of true Holyoke sheerness and strength. This sheerest of fine silk hosiery, with the new Holyoke process of curved knitting, and a choice of ten of the season's most stylish shades, is an exclusive combination absolutely unobtainable in any other hosiery.

HOLYOKE Cinderella HOSIERY

Here's a new kind of comfort

By the skillful use of a clever tuck, we have brought to the women of America greater comfort and beauty in underdress.

With a short front, and a long, almost accordion-like back, we have eliminated baggy ugliness and made a garment that fits the body snugly in any position.

No more stuffy, bunglesome underwear. Wear Kickernicks sized to actual body measurements.

In all the modish colors, fabrics and styles, it is made with fine craftsmanship and finish you'll appreciate.

If your best dealer hasn't them, send for booklet to Winget Kickernick Company, Minneapolis, Minnesota.

Onlooker Footwear

"Mentone", the model illustrated, combines the high, all-leather heel, so essential to spectator smartness, with subtle grace and featherweight construction. Each Delman shoe, entirely hand-made by mastercraftsmen, retains its beauty of line as long as the shoe endures. "Mentone", in an appropriate monotone combination of calf and suède, is available in black, brown, green, wine or blue. $22.50.

CREPE SATINS for evening, in white or vivid jewel colors. Crepe Satins for daytime, in black, or the darker shades of green, blue or brown.

These are the dictates of Paris—and only the best of Crepe Satins can do justice to the new designs.

Softness, refinement, loveliness—linked with moderate price. These you can be sure of if you ask for SKINNER'S,—the name that means quality in silks. Look for the Skinner label in dresses purchased ready to wear.

The GOSSARD

Line of Beauty

Model 9672, a combination fashioned of fine batiste and hand loomed elastic, with 13-inch skirt. The bust section is of dainty lace... The same design may also be had in other fabrics in other price ranges.

The adjustable feature of this new foundation works figure miracles!

No matter what your waistline measures, the lacing adjustment on each side of this unique Gossard model will slenderize it to a fashionable curved-in line—and cause a prominent diaphragm and abdomen to magically disappear! The modified uplift design moulds the bust to perfect contour... A foundation design that's indispensable to smart grooming.

THE BARBARA—In French mat kid or patent leather with narrow strap delicately touched with genuine reptile. Graceful Louis XV heel. Also in green kid with green suede quarter and Cuban Louis heel.

“YOUR FOOTPRINT IN LEATHER”

A princess in a sedan chair might never feel the need of Matrix Shoes but YOU, busy-modern-woman, welcome Matrix Shoes eagerly, joyously, for their twin qualities of fashion and comfort . . . Shoes to flatter every slender, lovely line of your foot, to curve delicately into an aristocratic arch, to cling snugly to a gracefully tapering heel—no princess could want prettier footwear! . . . Indeed, a Matrix Shoe cuddles your foot like its own footprint; the sole is permanently moulded to fit every curve and arch of the natural foot . . . Matrix is a new kind of daytime shoe—smart as if fashion were its only aim, and with a comfort possible only to “Your Footprint in Leather”. Write for Fashion Announcement. E. P. Reed & Co., Rochester, N. Y. New York Style Studio: 47 W. 34th St., N. Y. C.

THE DORSETTE—Rich black suede with distinctive collar, vamp-band, and tip of genuine Rajah lizard in black and grey. Also in brown suede trimmed with genuine raisin Rajah lizard.

THE BILTMORE—A youthful 4-yelet tie of Autumn brown kid with genuine raisin Rajah lizard used generously on tips, vamps, quarters, and Cuban heels. Also in French mat kid with genuine black Calcutta lizard.

“YOUR FOOTPRINT IN LEATHER”

“If the American woman knew intrinsic fabric values as well as you and I do, it would be practically impossible to sell her a fine woolen garment, unless it was made of Forstmann Fabrics.”

The above remark was made recently to Mr. Forstmann by the nationally prominent head of one of the country's leading shops for women. It is true that facts which have always been recognized by those best qualified to judge have never been placed before the American woman whom they most vitally concern. On the opposite page appears for the first time a statement of fact from an organization whose leadership in the manufacture of fine woolens has stood unchallenged in Europe as well as in America for more than a hundred years.

Forstmann Fabrics

THE GREAT DESIGNERS of the country are now about to present their new creations for Fall. Without exception, the better costumes on which their reputations as stylists depend, will feature a single group of woolen materials: FORSTMANN FABRICS. ■ For more than a century and a quarter, these exquisite woolens have maintained a position of supremacy unparalleled in the world of fashion. They not only dominate the fabric mode, they create it. These simple facts have been accepted as axiomatic for generations by the most important designers, manufacturers and retailers. We believe they should be equally understood and appreciated by the well-dressed American woman toward whom, in the end, all of our efforts are directed. ■ FORSTMANN FABRICS, due to the use of the best and finest raw materials, and the meticulous care employed in their manufacture, are proportionately more expensive than other woolens, but their superiority in style, color, and wearing qualities make it a real economy to buy them in preference to inferior substitutes. ■ Ask the salespeople in your own favorite shop to show you the costumes now being presented in FORSTMANN FABRICS. ■ Ask, too, to see the most famous Fabric and Color Guide in the world, the FORSTMANN FABRIC BOOK.

ACCELERATION...

ANYONE who has seen wild ducks rise from the water and speed away knows what real acceleration is.

And there's real acceleration in the Ethyl-driven car, which moves smoothly ahead when the traffic sign says, "Go." That's because, when you buy Ethyl Gasoline, you give your car two things it needs: good gasoline plus the Ethyl anti-knock compound developed by General Motors Research Laboratories, after years of research to create a better motor fuel.

Try Ethyl on your steepest hill—see how much longer you stay in high. Try it on your next hard drive—see how much fresher you are at the end of the trip. Try it this week end. Stop at an Ethyl pump. Ethyl Gasoline Corporation, New York City

The Ethyl emblem, wherever you see it, always says, "Here is good gasoline of high anti-knock quality."

Knocks out that "knock."

CAN YOU ECONOMIZE AND LOOK LIKE A DUCHESS?

This autumn when everyone is economizing, the fashion creators have launched the most elegant and extravagant mode in years. Velvets, damasks, ostrich tips, sweeping satins. We are going to have to look like duchesses without spending accordingly. Our wit and shopping ability are challenged.

Vogue has taken up the challenge. Follow Vogue through these crucial months and Vogue will show you how to achieve this new exciting elegance without ruining your bank account . . . how to spend on successes and save on failures, how to make every single penny count in chic.

A dab of Vogue every now and then does not do the job. Vogue is a tonic to be taken regularly every fortnight. You have to read Vogue, use Vogue, absorb Vogue before the difference will begin to show in your clothes and in your bank book. Sign the coupon now and watch the results!

The Lady Diana

A famous design in a charming

The proud simplicity of Lady Diana (portrayed in close-up above) can add grace to your entire table ensemble. The charmingly youthful spirit of the pattern is interpreted not only in flat silver, but in the other sterling pieces, the matching dishes and services that are so useful — and so important to really distinguished table settings.

Lady Diana is a very new pattern in sterling, but for all its youth, a very famous one. Perhaps that is because the Lady Diana, like the modern bride herself, is something that no day but this could have produced. There are other simple designs in sterling. There are other modern designs in sterling. But in this one there seems to be an unusually happy combination of simplicity with a modern background, of free youthful lines with soft-gleaming contours . . . Such beauty goes deep. It will endure as long as hospitality itself.

Emily Post, famous author of "Etiquette: the Blue Book of Social Usage," standard reference on all matters pertaining to weddings, outlines briefly in this new and charming booklet the more important modern wedding conventions.

The Towle Silversmiths, Dept. K-9, Newburyport, Mass. Please send me Emily Post's "Bridal Silver and Wedding Customs." Enclosed is 25¢ in coin or stamps, to pay mailing and handling costs.

The Chased Diana

companion

The addition of a delicate chased garland transforms the Lady Diana into this dainty companion pattern—the Chased Diana, rich with restrained decoration. If you are one for whom the present mode of greater femininity has a deep appeal; if you approve most heartily of simplicity softened by charming details—then you will adore the new Chased Diana! Both patterns, of course, are not only very new, but very, very right; and either pattern will blend beautifully with whatever background you provide for it.

Here (as well as a photograph can bring it to you) is the new Chased Diana! This lovely companion pattern to the Lady Diana also finds expression in every important sterling piece and service to match the flat silver. Can't you see your own table, agleam with a complete ensemble of the Chased Diana's modern beauty?

Greatly refined in quality conveniently compact for travel

SO MUCH TO PACK—and so little room in your bag! There are certain things you must take, of course, but the less precious space they occupy, the better. That is why so many women prefer CURADS. Here is a sanitary protection, still further refined to meet the most fastidious requirements of safety and comfort—compressed into an inconspicuous, compact roll that occupies only three small inches of space. Manufactured by one of the largest manufacturers of surgical dressings, CURADS sanitary napkins are made of the finest hospital gauze, filled with the softest of white fluffy cotton of great absorbency. CURADS are sold in most of the leading department stores. If you cannot get them, send 40c to the Lewis Manufacturing Co., Division of the Kendall Company, Walpole, Massachusetts, for a full-size roll in a plain wrapper

No larger than a jar of cold cream

Not only for travel . . . but at any time, the inconspicuous compactness of CURADS is a convenience appreciated alike by the matron, the business woman, the college girl, by house guests. Six large pads in a continuous roll.

WATCH YOUR HUSBAND

Is the Price of Success beginning to tell?

The path to achievement is lined with the headstones of men who couldn't stop work. Earnest, unselfish martyrs to the modern fetish of material success.

In the hall of achievement are seated the men whose wives made them rest; who were quick to detect the signs of incipient breakdown, who demanded a surcease from the relentless, health-destroying grind of modern business.

Wives must do this, for their husbands' welfare—and their own. A winter cruise via Red Star or White Star lines is ideal for rest, relaxation; for paving the way to new interest, new zest, new romance in life. The following cruises are packed with health and recreation—and the price of these all-important rest periods is surprisingly moderate. Let us send you the booklet, "Watch Your Husband." It may be worth thousands of dollars to you and your loved ones.

Around the World—Life's grandest travel adventure! Red Star liner Belgenland, most famous world cruising ship. Sails westward from New York, December 15. Duration, 133 days. Over a six-times-tried and proved itinerary. $1750 (up) including shore excursions.

Mediterranean—Great White Star liner Britannic (new) and Adriatic. 46 days, calling at the principal points of tourist interest. Sailings: January 8 and 17, February 26, March 7. Rates: $695-$750 (up) 1st Class; $420 TOURIST Third Cabin—both including shore excursions.

ITALY

Open my heart and you shall see Engraved upon it, Italy.

So wrote Robert Browning, and only those who know the loveliness of Italy and the gracious hospitality of its people can understand the great poet's profound enthusiasm.

The intense blue of the Italian sky... deepened to sapphire in the famous lakes.... colorful cities and sunny mountain towns... valleys brimming over with gay flowers and sunlight... such is Italy... the perfect vacation-land.

De luxe hostelrys, and hotels at moderate rates. Motor-bus service and connections with fast trains. Sleeping car accommodations. Information gladly given at any Travel Bureau.

"O, THE MONKEYS HAVE NO TAILS IN ZAMBOANGA..."

Wednesday—Manila. Nobody laughs now when the waiter speaks to me in Spanish! I already know 50 words. Manila's a great place. On the go every minute since we arrived last Friday. Plenty of Spanish atmosphere! We took a two-wheeled, four-footed "Calesa"—the native taxis of Manila and jogged over to Intramuros—the old Spanish walled city. Built in Magellan's time—1500 something. Moorish type houses with grilled windows, of translucent oyster shells instead of glass. Fragrant acacia trees and magnolias shade the courtyards. The great Cathedral is as inspiring as any we saw in Italy. Visited the University of Santo Tomas—founded before anybody ever stepped on Plymouth Rock. That's a long time... Even the Aquarium is built in an old stone vault. Interesting, too. Black crocodiles, wicked sharks and green-eyed turtles wink at us.

The outside walls of Intramuros are 8 feet thick. Concealed iron-spiked gates ready to drop on the enemy... but no enemy now. Everybody smiles. Black-eyed native girls with balloon sleeves made of pineapple cloth. Their favorite fruit is a long black cigar. They lure us into their hat shops. Didn't know there were so many hats in the world. Many are woven by hand under water—so fine. And only a few pesos apiece. (A peso is 50 cents in our language). Then we shopped at all the lace and linen places. Exquisite convent embroidery on pretty voile frocks.

Sunday—To the Naval Station at Cavite.

O-O-O-o—such big guns! On the way back, played a tune on the bamboo pipe organ at Las Pinas. Only one of its kind in the world... saw where Admiral Dewey made a name for himself. Drove to Fort McKinley for tea and stopped at the ruins of Guadalupe. Enormous monastery built in 1601... Came back by way of Bilibid prison. Saw them weaving wicker things. Handsome carved chests and furniture.

Tuesday—One more feather in our caps! Now, we've shot the rapids of Pagsanjan. The hectic tourist traveler doesn't know what he's missing. What luck that we stopped over two weeks. That's a grand advantage of the President Liners. Early in the morning we motored to Pagsanjan. Through deep tropical forests with monkeys chattering in the trees. Wild cockatoos. And bunches of bananas hanging upside down, to our surprise. Passed jumbled native villages. Down at the river we climbed into little dug-out canoes called bancas. Then up the narrow 3-mile gorge. 500 feet deep. To the falls. Now, down we go—with a whirl and a splash. Zoom! At times

This is the one steamship service on which you may go Round the World as you please, when you please and with all the comforts and conveniences that you enjoy in your own home. All staterooms are large, outside, with beds (not berths). Deluxe Liners, luxurious public apartments, outdoor swimming pool, world-famed cuisine. First Class only, Round the World, as low as $1110—$1250; with private bath $1370. Your ticket good for two full years, stop over in any or all of 22 ports in 14 countries, as you like.

You may start from New York, Boston, Seattle, Victoria, B. C., Los Angeles or San Francisco. Every week a palatial President Liner sails from Los Angeles and San Francisco—via the Sunshine Belt—for Honolulu, Japan, China, Manila and thence fortnightly to Malaya—Java nearby—Ceylon, (India overnight by Pullman), Egypt, Italy, France, New York.

Every fortnight a President Liner sails from Seattle and Victoria, B. C., for Japan, China, Manila and Round the World. Every two weeks a similar Liner sails from Boston, New York for Havana, Panama, California, thence Round the World.

On the President Liners you have the same freedom as on a private yacht. You virtually write your own ticket and see the world as you want to see it.

completely lost in spray. But not a canoe topples. Another cataract—and another. What thrills. The fastest ride of my life. A fitting climax for a high week-end. (We're certainly having a lot gayer time in the Orient than we had in Europe last summer).

Ten days later—Who would have time to write a diary in Manila? Last three days we've been in that cool Elysium of Baguio. Nine hours by motor straight up into the hills. Everybody we know is at Baguio... Tonight our farewell party at the Polo Club and tomorrow we sail for Singapore and Java on the S. S. President Johnson. No wonder we love Manila—with its grandee hospitality. Red hibiscus and white orchids on our dinner table. Set on the lawn with candle light. Iced persimmons and salted pili nuts to begin with... Abalone, crab and all the trimmings... A tropic night we'll always remember... And little echoes in my heart of a funny song I'll never quite recall... that goes something like this—

"O, the monkeys have no tails in Zamboanga—
They were bitten off by whales in Zamboanga..."
That... is Manila!

Ancient Hawaii

Lives Again in Fall Pageantry

LEGENDS... gripping Sagas of the South Seas aglow with the eerie light of crackling koa logs, pounding with the pulse of great gourd drums and the ominous chant of crouching warrior bands, yield up their bronze-skinned heroes in Autumn Pageantry to recall and make real again the Festal Days of old Hawaii.

Fall is Festive Time in Hawaii... November, a month of mellow glory set apart in ancient days for tests of valor and recital in vivid drama of stirring tales of frail canoes on trackless seas... of gods and goddesses who painted Hawaiian skies or turned slumbering mountain giants into fiery lava forges... of epic Autumn nights woven of the wonder of rippling velvet waters touched with the gold of a rising tropic moon.

Time has not stilled the voice of Old Hawaii. It spans the oceans with the winds and lures in Fall a definite class of followers eager for a glimpse into Hawaii's historic past... for living pictures of regal splendor... for the staccato beat of split bamboo and the sluff of bare brown feet... for a succession of exotic pageant events spread over idyllic weeks when the Isles of Unbelievable Beauty borrow the peace of a placid ocean and radiantly bask in their rainbow tints.

There will be no regret for Summer's passing if you plan your Fall in Hawaii... November and December are bright with the verve of Spring. There is no reluctant leave-taking of fading flower or blossom... no autumnal chill to dull the zest of splashing spray or dim the sparkle of the morning round of golf. There is no icy threat of winter in the caress of fragrant South Sea breezes... just the whispered lure of a lovely land that bids the traveller "Linger!"

Hawaii is just a few days away. Liners as proud as any that float make the voyage over sun-smoothed seas in four to six days from the four gateways of the Pacific.

The Rotterdam has been entirely modernized. Real beds, instead of berths, hot and cold running water in most rooms, a delightful tile swimming pool and modern gymnasium are among the many new improvements which make this ever popular ship of even greater appeal to the discriminating cruise passenger.

HUBRITE

Informal Frocks

For the first cool days—

... Hubrite sponsors this jaunty jacket effect frock of soft, sheer, wool flat crêpe, in the new fall shades—monk brown, green, rust, navy, and black.

The slightly flared skirt, front and back pleats, tailored button holes, the vestee and Ascot tie of pastel silk piqué—all add to its dignified simplicity.

Ask to see the new fall collection of Hubrite frocks, ranging from $2 to $11; in the informal dress shops of such stores as McCreery's, New York; Loeser's, Brooklyn; Jordan's, Boston; Sibley's, Rochester; Taylor's, Kansas City; Younker Bros., Des Moines; Hale Bros., Sacramento.

The Hubrite label in a frock is your promise of pleasure in wearing it

School Time Is Upon Us

Vacations are ending. Children return from the woods and the sea and the mountains. School programs are fast developing.

The best schools are filling their quotas now. If you have not yet decided which is to be your child's school, now is the time to settle the question.

Glance through the advertisements of fine schools that appear in these pages. Vogue has investigated them all, and recommends them to you for their excellent administration and intelligent staffs . . . for their high standards of academic and non-academic training.

We suggest you write for catalogues of some of the schools that attract you most.

We also suggest that you let us send you Vogue's Book of Private Schools—just published. An authoritative study of all types of private schools, this book discusses the important details that should be investigated before deciding on which kind of school to which to send your child.

Vogue's Book of Private Schools covers schools from the nursery school to the post-graduate . . . from the American military to the European finishing school. It covers such details as curriculum, equipment, faculty, entrance requirements, discipline, and aims of each type of school.

We will be glad to send you a copy of Vogue's Book of Private Schools—without cost and without obligation. Its pages are rich in suggestion of new developments in education, the standards you should expect, and even of schools possibly unknown to you that are direct answers to your needs.

Let us know if we may send you this book, or if we can be of personal help to you.

In an old Victorian House

What if grandfather did build your house in a God-fearing moment? You can change the date line of every room—if you get House & Garden's Book of Color Schemes . . . gleaned from recent issues of House & Garden.

A mirror cornice in the bay window, reflecting the painted ceiling with its sky, clouds and stars. Shades painted to play Venetian blinds. Woodwork caramel pink. Crystal lights on the table, and such an astounding cloth!

Just one of the 312 illustrations in this grand Book. Just one of the 237 color schemes, showing the work of the smartest decorators. There are articles, too, that tell you what, when, how and where about color for every room in the house, for every period from the Renaissance to the middle of next week, for every taste from the most politely restrained to the one that likes to kick up its heels. . . . The expenditure represented runs into the millions. But you can have the results to study in picture form for five little runaway dollars.

Did we say it was a limited edition? Yes, sir and madam, we did.

VAN RAALTE

CREATORS OF STOCKINGS, UNDERTHINGS, AND GLOVES

THE SINGLETTE IS MADE ONLY BY VAN RAALTE, REGISTERED IN U. S. PATENT OFFICE

The Singlette in the illustration, Style 9735, is bandeau, vest, pantie, girdle, and garters, all in one. It is fashioned of the glamorous Illusion Cloth. The lace cascading down the panties is hand-run Alencon. In many charming colors . . . Dawn Glow, Ivory, Azure, Nile, Melo-

Tan, and Black, it sells for thirty dollars. The Van Raalte Singlette is made in a wide variety of materials. Models of Glove Silk, thirty dollars to five dollars; VR-Tex, eight dollars to three dollars; Rayon, three dollars and a half and two dollars. "...because you love nice things."

THE cut of the season's gowns calls for a perfection of figure so romantic that woman's only salvation is in subtle underthings. The Van Raalte Singlette was especially designed to idealize the feminine figure. There are many styles . . . from the frivolous things with low-cut backs, for evening, to models smartly simple, for tailored wear. Every garment is many garments in one . . . minimizing the cost of underdress, enhancing its comfort. At the better shops throughout the country.

LOVELINESS DOESN'T JUST HAPPEN

White sheets that gleam like rippled silver~

"WAMSUTTA Percale sheets are whiter as they come from the mill and whiter after use than other cotton fabrics" . . .

"Ordinary soap and water keeps them white without the use of chemicals . . ."

These are the matter of fact statements of a laundry superintendent and a hotel manager.

The gleaming whiteness of Wamsutta Percale sheets and pillow cases was never more perfectly shown than in this painting by Elizabeth Paxton . . . and, with it, the exquisite fineness of their texture that can make your bed not only a thing of beauty but the most deliciously comfortable place in the whole wide world.

Miss MARION TALLEY takes a turn. at Homemaking

"Color means a great deal to me . . . I knew which colors I wanted the moment I saw the New Chatham Blankets!"

SHE'S a very sweet, very lovely, very young girl—this Marion Talley who won triumphs with her gorgeous young voice and then turned her back on a career to be—just a girl.

And wasn't it thrilling to call on her and hear her plans for the new home on the sixteen-hundred-acre farm in Kansas!

"Do you really care for housekeeping?" And how her eyes sparkled in response!

We had spent months perfecting the colors for our new all-wool blankets, and in having the most exquisite brocaded satin bindings designed for them. And then we took them to 10 Lovely Colors . . . 4 Entirely New in Blankets. Patterned Bindings, New . . . Exclusive!

This blanket and linen cabinet Miss Marion Talley found in The Closet Shop on Madison Avenue. It shows to such advantage the charming colors of her beloved new Chatham Blankets!

young people who were eagerly interested in their homes. "Do you like them?" we asked.

Miss Marion Talley was most enthusiastic. "I knew exactly which colors I wanted the moment I saw them! I choose yellow for myself, green for my mother's room, and the lovely peach for my sister.

"They are so warm, and woolly! That's what's so wonderful about all-wool blankets!"

And so another young householder had voiced her instant approval of the colors and bindings we had tried so hard to please the American housewife with . . .

The new Chatham Blankets are made by one of the oldest and most highly esteemed blanket manufacturers in America.

There are five grades, ranging in price from $6 to $18. All five grades are all-wool and pre-shrunk, and come in ten lovely new colors, four of which have never before been used in blankets.

The very bindings are especially designed—a swallow pattern, a butterfly pattern, and the Colonial pattern which Miss Talley chose, while the more inexpensive blankets are bound in beautiful brocaded sateen.

You will find these lovely blankets at leading stores everywhere. Chatham Manufacturing Co. New York Offices—57 Worth Street. Mills: Winston-Salem and Elkin, N. C.

EYE VIEW OF THE MODE

She, the smart woman of the world who so lately wore a tailored fur coat and a businesslike cloche, is casting these things into limbo and letting her sartorial mind wander back to the delightful, darling, and darkly romantic 'nineties. She slips her shoulders into feminine furs, delicate with scent. Her evening coat may be a fur dolman; her sables may be sewed into a little cape, as Victorian as the day is long. Her tiny hats crown a ringleted head—like head-pieces of the last century with no purpose but to decorate. She dresses romantically in dark green velvet. She pins violets to her huge square muff, as did Oscar Wilde's enchanting ladies, with their allure and none of their coyness. In a romantic moment, she wears ostrich tips or camellias in her hair. She pins fresh flowers over the coloured ribbon sashes that encircle her waist. Such details of the pre-mauve era as ruchings, run ribbons, plaid surah blouses, leg-o'-mutton sleeves flourish in her wardrobe. She has wrapped herself in the romantic charm of the fin de siècle. She has taken the delicious essence of that time and is using it as her perfume. Is she herself Victorian?

Far from it. She is the singing figure-head at the prow of that Argo now sailing new seas—

MRS. HARRISON WILLIAMS

This interesting portrait of Mrs. Harrison Williams, who is one of the most attractive and best dressed of modern American beauties, is a distinguished example of the work of the French artist, Bernard Boutet de Monvel. Mrs. Williams was the former Mona Strader and is as well known on the Continent as on this side of the Atlantic. She spends part of the time in her Paris apartment, the summers at Bayville, Long Island, where she and her husband have a country house, and the winters at Palm Beach

PARIS

"CHANTILLY," MARIA GUY'S WINE VELVET AFTERNOON HAT—BENDEL

PUTS ROMANCE IN A HAT-BOX

HATS used to be definite, concrete objects, to be judged critically on a stand; the same hat easily recognizable no matter what head bore it, having a certain solidity and a line of its own. Practical, a necessity, first; ornamental, second. Now, hats are limp handfuls of possibilities that only awaken into character and chic on their wearer's head, subject to her taste and ingenuity, serving no practical purpose, but decorating the head to greater advantage, as much an accessory of luxury and elegance as jewels, and as priceless in its quality of chic.

For heads are of paramount importance, these days. After the severe uniformity of sleek, short hair, each woman seems suddenly to have rediscovered the individuality of her own head, the chance for variety in her appearance that lies in a coiffure and a hat. Hats take on some of the pleasant characteristics of masks or wigs; they can alter a personality, throwing into relief different features, revealing certain contours, becoming exquisite and charming frames that give one the illusion of a different face, all because they are so strongly personal, following no set rules. One can no longer say, "I like a hat because of this or that feature," but, "I like this hat because it is becoming, because it gives a new expression to my face and a new angle to my head, because it suits my hair." For many hats are built around and for a coiffure, and much of the head continues to show, particularly at the side and towards the back, with the suspicion of a new coquettish forward tilt to brims and berets, above the uncovered brow. Much more hair is in evidence than has been in many a season.

This past season has taught the milliners ways of manipulating materials that are infinitely becoming; they have borrowed from the dressmaker's bag of tricks, adapted the coiffeur's technique; they have overrun formulas and created hats to suit any mood. Romantic hats, turbans swathed with all the art of the Eighteen-thirties, tilted brims and bandeaux that are almost Watteau-like; berets, with the fulness pulled forward to jut over one eye, that have all the native chic of a pre-War apache's casquette; bonnets with streamers, miniature marquis tricornees, suggestive of powder and patches. Faintly suggestive, for they are all really as distinctly modern and of our own day and era as was the first plain felt cloche.

The interest in a hat is no longer concentrated at any given point. Each side, the front, the back has interest of its own and is full of unexpected surprises that might have been contradictions a year ago, but are harmonious parts of the whole

- "Arlequin," J. Suzanne Talbot's very supple toque of black cut velvet, has corduroy-like ribs and is folded in points suggesting a bicorné; Hollander
- "Un Coquin," from Maria Guy, is of dark brown hatter's plush trimmed with white cut velvet ribbon. The brim tilts forward, above a bandeau; Saks-Fifth Avenue
- Reboux doubles sheerest black felt in this hat to form a brim that puffs around the crown. It is trimmed with white cut velvet; from Bonwit Teller

now. Though there is greater fulness at some part of the head, hats have much less depth, resting lightly and revealingly on the head, free from all deafening binding and bondage. Smartness and chic they have, as well as romance, but it is a soft chic, a flattering smartness. For, brims or no brims, toques, berets, or turbans, the outlines are soft, the edges supple instead of harsh.

Close-fitting, small, but with new lines, new tilts, new angles, the toque, first cousin to the beret, has assumed much of its character, revelling in fabrics, tumbling in soft folds caught back here and there by a restraining band of ribbon or a bow, and aspiring to be a turban. The beret itself has undergone many transformations, acquiring much subtlety and sophistication through its sojourn in the cosmopolitan world, a far cry indeed from its humble Basque ancestor. The little cap, too, aims at more importance and borrows many of the features of other hats, timidly putting forth curves and points, rising to many a formal occasion. Several chic examples are shown on this and the opposite page.

The different parts of a hat can no longer be detailed, so a brim seems but the continuation of a crown, a (Continued on page 144)

HATS LIMP IN THE HAND TAKE NEW FORM ON THE HEAD

- "Aphrodite," J. Suzanne Talbot's hat of supple black felt, has a doubled brim drawn back onto the crown across the front and stitched in place, forming a rounded frame for the face. The hat extends in split points into the nape of the neck in back and is worn high on the forehead, like all the smartest hats; Altman
- In Reboux's "Béret Biarritz," a new angle is given by the full, rounded top that falls forward to shadow one eye. The hat is made of black cut velvet with a chevron pattern and has circular bands in the crown joined by black grosgrain pipings. It is one of the many new versions of the chic beret; Bonwit Teller
- Agnès's "Turf," a beret of light-weight navy-blue felt, adds sophistication to the youthful charm of a child's sailor hat. The raw edge of the beret is turned up to form a slight bandeau all around the face, and a satin bow ties in back; Bonwit Teller

PANORAMA OF NEWPORT

"WEETAMOE" AND "ENTERPRISE"

A SYMPHONY changing from adagio to prestissimo, a film run off at twice the normal pace, the tempo of staid old Newport speeding up this summer as a result of the America's Cup Races being sailed there for the first time.

The antediluvian Renaults and Brewsters, the few remaining victorias catapulting down the avenue along with the Rolls and Hispanos, people dashing into the sea and out of it, winning love sets at tennis, and dancing all night breathlessly.

Armies of camera men lurking outside the gates of Bailey's (that famous old beach that has furnished plots for dozens of novels, where the last of the black silk stockings were seen and on the sands of which until recently no actor or actress was admitted). Deck tennis being played with enthusiasm and ferocious skill by assorted bright young things in a minimum of sweaters and linen trousers. Almost no shorts on the horizon, but pyjamas simply legion, the smartest being of heavy linen worn with tremendous straw hats. Mrs. Edwin Main Post's amusing cotton piqué bathing-suits in a variety of colours. The young girls all lunching on the beach in flowered overalls.

MR. PARSONS' SHOP HAS A FINE COLLECTION OF MARINE PRINTS AND PAINTINGS

NEWPORT GOES ANTIQUING

THERE is a new shop in Newport—a shop in a quaint old house on the top of the hill leading up from the harbour. Its fine doorway has been featured in books on Colonial architecture, and its upper storey windows once looked out on the sailing ships that brought prosperity to Newport. Its old panelling, pine floors, HL hinges, and bottle-glass windows are still there, but now they form a setting for the collection of antiques of Schuyler L. Parsons and Marguerite Valk, and the rooms that were occupied by a succession of prominent old families are open to the public for the first time.

These rooms are arranged as in a residence, and furniture, rugs, silver, glass, and china of many countries and periods are mingled harmoniously. A Chippendale desk, a sixth century head, a Queen Anne chair, a Regence table, a modern painting all combine delightfully, and a collection of fine marine prints and paintings is equally at home with an up-to-date backgammon table.

This is one of a series of antique shops—"chain stores" to be run by Mrs. Valk and Mr. Parsons—in Charleston from October to May, in Newport from June to October, and in Aiken from January to April, with visits to other resorts.

VICTORIAN ORNAMENTS FOR THE HAIR

THE VICOMTESSE de NOAILLES

ONCE upon a time, heads were very, very much alike—a parting on the left side, the hair universally bobbed, waved, and somehow flattened. Brunette, blond, or white hair, all of them had the same even look, from morning till night, from sixteen to sixty.

The new sense of individuality that invades the mode has influenced the dressing of the hair decidedly. Women play with their growing locks and find a personal, charming way to comb, roll, twist, and arrange them. The newest coiffures show a mixture of flat waves and curls, but the disposition of the single roll at the nape of the neck or of plentiful curls all around the head is planned in accordance with the wearer's type or the hair's softness and obedience—and, also, the maid's skill.

The elaborate coiffure is the perfect finish to a ball dress—a coiffure combining alluring softness with groomed simplicity. Curls must never appear untidy, and so, to hold them in perfect control, some of the smartest women in Paris have found an excuse (more than an excuse—rather, a sound, logical reason) for adding to their coiffures decorative details that are practical, smart, and becoming. There is no rule for their selection other than individuality and personal taste and, also a feeling of proportion. These ornaments (Continued on page 126)

At the Ambassadeurs, a smart Parisienne (shown in the sketch above) placed a very narrow bandeau of diamonds high above her brow, fastening it between the two thick, curled rolls of hair

Seen at the gala charity ball of "Les Amis de La France" was the charming coiffure shown at the right, with a delicate multi-coloured jewelled brooch placed among the curls over one ear

A NEW LENGTH IN ERMINE

YOUR NEW FUR COAT

YOU think that you would like one. You wonder. You decide you need one. You figure about what you can spend. It occurs to you that it will have to last through 1931 and 1932, not to mention 1933. You grow alarmed. Your husband tells you that before you invest that amount of money you had better be dead sure that you know what you want. You ask a few friends. They all advise something different. You pace through the shops. You grow weary. You fret; you stew. You lie awake at night. And then, all of a sudden, one afternoon while you are being dummy, you lean over the bridge table and pick up a stray new Vogue. You turn to an article called "Your New Fur Coat" and discover everything you want to know, in a Vogue shell.

Town fur coats? The exciting news about them begins just under the arm, with a slightly fitted princesse feeling. There is no extra fulness below and no circular flare, and yet there is a new width. They are never, in this year of grace, cut dead straight. The smartest are of flat, supple furs, handled like fabrics, and they all look exactly as if they had been made by dressmakers out of very beautiful material by the yard. You should not look furry in your new city coat, nor sporty, nor opulently South American. You should look slim and sleek and, though it may be ten in the morning and you are buying soap at Saks, you should feel as if you were going to tea at the British Embassy.

The lamb is the smartest animal. In fact, all the flat moiré furs are good: breitschwantz (alias broadtail), caracal, galiak, astrakhan, Persian lamb, and American broadtail. If you want to do yourself very well, a plain black broadtail coat with a collar of the same is the smartest thing you could possibly get. Dyed Russian ermine is seen about, both in black, which is Parisian and a distinct novelty, and in cocoa or light brown, which has the advantage of not looking too boulevardry in the country when you go out for Thanksgiving or Christmas. Mink, always a passion of smart New York, is slightly less expensive this year, and at last the furriers have learned to cut it so that if you are nice and slender you still look so. Grey squirrel—the skins handled like mink—makes a good long coat for a girl not yet "out."

The town coat usually covers the day dress, though it is no crime at all if the afternoon dress shows slightly beneath, and a few coats are knee length, which is definitely smart. These city coats are seldom belted, but sometimes deeply and diagonally wrapped, and you hold them about you in a great Cossack swirl. Beware of trick sleeves, like the bishops that come in tight at the cuff. They have to be very well done and usually end in being a bore. The best sleeves are traditional and straight and simple or else loose and wide in the celebrated manner of Vionnet. As to collars, the self-trimmed coat remains the best. If you can forbear that becoming fluff about your shoulders, do so. The new collars are less voluminous; they stand off slightly or roll and really serve just to frame the face. Linings are of plain crêpe, with a bit of excitement, if you will, in the (Continued on page 140)

REPAIRING SUMMER RAVAGES

THIS is the time of year when we begin to feel that the skin you love to touch is just one of those things you read about! Our mirrors tell us, with that brutal certainty reserved for severest critics, that we may have packed away bathing-suits and tennis dresses and berets, but that our summer faces are still very much with us.

It is the old end-of-the-summer saga. We lie for hours on the beach, or we motor about without a thought of protection for our skin, and our "outdoors" complexions seem suitable under country skies. But, as soon as summer is officially over, these same complexions have a way of seeming plainly weather-beaten. Last year, when sunburn ruled the world, lingering touches of sunburn were not a disgrace. In some instances, they were prolonged by artificial means. But this year is something very different. Sunburn is now regarded as part of summer and Southern resorts. However chic it has been with our summer clothes, it is going to be just a great mistake with our winter clothes. And it is certainly a detriment when we want to employ the more pronounced make-up that is a definite trend of this mode. So, now is the time to do something—or various things—in behalf of our complexions. There is enough competition in this world, without adding the handicap of a leathery skin, when it is something that can be avoided.

There are two points of view from which to approach this matter of repairing summer ravages. First, there is the skin that is frankly tanned and needs to be bleached as quickly as is safe and possible. Then, there is the weathered skin, for which the treatment must be one that softens and refines.

The weathered skin, rashly exposed to the elements, has acquired a harsh outer crust. Atmospheric conditions have dried up the natural oils that are necessary to keep any complexion soft and smooth. An interesting fact about this phase is that, in England, the moisture that is always in the air keeps the elements from effecting this drying. But, unfortunately for our faces, we are not in England, and the sun and wind have been allowed to do their worst. What we want now is to lubricate the skin and help the natural oils back; to not only soften the outer, toughened layer, but to penetrate beneath it so that the new skin will come through soft and fine. Indiscriminate use of creams and occasional facial treatments will not accomplish this end. We need special oils and creams rich in oil content. We need mild stimulation. We need, when possible, a definite series of treatments in a salon.

There are any number of places where we can go to acquire these things, since every experienced specialist knows the types of skin with which she has to deal at the end of a long, hard summer and has specialized preparations and methods with which to meet the occasion. But, as is always the case, a great deal of the success of such a procedure depends upon the way in which we approach it. We must allow a certain definite time for treatments (not to mention a certain amount of money), and we must be willing to use supplementary preparations at home just as we are told.

If the choice of this beautifying venture is one of the Dorothy Gray salons, we will find there a series known specifically as "after-summer" treatments, supplemented by preparations to be used at home that will work upon the most weathered and leathered of skins. The cleansing cream that begins this treatment is really an oil in solid form, and it is followed by a mask of egg and almond meal and oil and other ingredients so blended that, while it is stimulating, the oil is ever present to prevent any possible drying effect. Another step in this treatment is the application of heated muscle oil and tissue cream that seep into the dried skin like the proverbial dew on parched ground. While this still is on the face, a skilful campaign of patting is carried on, to provide the stimulation that is a vital part of any beautifying process, whether it is for our figures, our faces, or our hair. In our early years, our circulation seems admirably active; our complexions glow, and our hair gleams. It is when the circulation slackens that the skin becomes relaxed and coarsened. If it is found that our skin requires a greater amount of stimulation than the patting achieves, a circulation ointment is suggested at certain intervals, (Continued on page 122)

AMUSING WINDOWS

THE window that is curtained too timidly lets down the room and makes the whole view it frames banal. The sweep of the East River and Hell Gate Bridge, the Golden Gate, or the Rond Point des Champs-Élysées loses a bit of its glamour when framed by a conventional drapery of respectable cretonne, hung on God-fearing hooks, like every other curtain in the building. Even good taste can become, through repetition, a bit robot.

Of late years, the changing needs of modern living have brought about a radical development in architecture and construction. New types of windows present new problems. Consequently, we find that the characteristic spirit of the twentieth century has given us some surprisingly effective and practical arrangements.

If you are decorating your husband's office, for instance, the design chosen must avoid fussiness. It must be in harmony with mergers and conferences and in keeping with the fire-proof modern feeling of the office building. An effect like that in the window executed by Robert Locher, shown in the photograph on this page, is a successful solution. Mirrored pilasters set off to advantage the "fins" of burnished aluminum that form its blinds, the perpendicular lines of which are echoed in the clean height of the sky-scrapers glimpsed outside. There are no curtains, and, on dull days, the blinds may be run to one side out of the way. Mr. Locher thinks that where curtains are used at all, in a room of this type, they are best made of stiff holland, arranged so that they will crush into deep pleats and slide into invisible curtain boxes in the mirrored sides. Also, he obtains an almost startling effect with curtains that are not curtains at all, but glass painted to simulate folds of fabric.

Possibly your apartment is a small one, and you need to give the illusion of space. Instead of curtains

Aluminum fins, painted glass, novel shutters, and curtains of surprising fabrics make gay frames for the world outside our windows that will break the lines of your walls, consider the old-fashioned interior shutters used by Jones and Erwin, which, when closed, make the window appear to be a panel in the wall of the room. Or, if your window-recesses are deep, this decorator suggests a mirrored top over the window-sill, on which beautiful shells or potted plants may be placed. Count Mario Di Zoppola, in a room that he designed for the Barclay Hotel in Philadelphia, used side panels of chromium nickel and perfectly straight curtains, lighted indirectly from the mirrored cornice above.

In the more naïve times of our grandfathers, the curtains and drapery decorating a window were only a frame for the delightful landscape outside, which it was highly desirable to reveal. Unfortunately, the aeries inhabited by so many moderns do not always offer vistas of equal charm. As it is wise to forget, if possible, that the blank wall opposite is peculiarly unlovely or that the roof of the building beneath you is not kept overclean, you may rejoice over the very new and smart means (Continued on page 130)

ALL THAT TWITTERS IS NOT ARCHITECT

WHY WOMEN FIGHT WITH THEIR ARCHITECTS

BY HAROLD STERNER

PORTRAIT OF AN ARCHITECT AS HIS
CLIENT SETS SAIL FOR EUROPE

ALTHOUGH there may be somewhere in the world a lady fortunate enough not to have quarrelled with her architect, it is certain that the majority who have built houses will feel that the title of this article indicates a general truth.

The sources of these quarrels are legion. The house always seems to cost more than the client expected (that is to say, more than she would like it to cost, for expectation is always founded upon optimism); closets turn out to be smaller than the impression of them gained from the blue-prints; and the room that was supposed to have a Directoire character has somehow or other become Adam. Nor are these disputes by any means less unpleasant because the architect is able to find an answer to many of his client's complaints and disappointments.

Unfortunately, it is far easier to describe such incidents than it is to find the remedy for them. These difficulties often arise because the association formed between the architect and his client has for its object the solution of a very personal problem, which usually ends by involving as many personal sensibilities as a divorce suit and which can not be solved by adherence to a well-understood business code, as in the purchase of an automobile.

Because she knows that so much of the building of a house is going to touch upon her intimate feelings, it is difficult for a woman to choose her architect as impersonally as she should. She foresees hours spent determining the colour of a room and choosing its furniture, and hence she is influenced by the consideration of whether or not the architect appears to have a sympathetic personality. The ideal architect should be a charming and amiable man, a creative genius, and a superlatively efficient executive, as well, but this combination, through some perversity of Nature, seldom occurs.

The woman client would be much happier in the long run if she chose her architect on the strength of his professional reputation, regardless of his assets as a dinner-guest. She should remember that building is necessarily hard work and that talent and efficiency therein are not based upon the same qualities that make an agreeable companion at cocktail time.

Granted that many women are disillusioned enough to trust their houses to professionals rather than friends, there is still a lingering inclination on the part of the sex to choose their architects on the basis that, if a man seems sympathetically enough impressed by their own needs and tastes, at least nothing definitely unpleasant will take place. This leads to a purely negative result. It is wiser, if one is not equipped to design a house oneself, to entrust the undertaking to some one who has definitely formed tastes and enough character to fight for them.

Then, again, many of the disappointments that occur are the result of an initial enthusiasm, which frequently carries away the architect as much as it does the client. This attitude, pleasant as it may seem to both sides, leads to complications in that each person is apt to accept certain things as understood when it is not possible to determine them rigidly. Many women building houses do not realize that some elements of a (Continued on page 116)

DECORATIONS AND DESSERTS

FOR THE HOSTESS

EXCEPT that they both begin with D and are both meant to appear on, and at, table, there is no particular reason why these two words should be presented, like twins, together. But so it is, and, since they make the first and last impressions at any dinner, perhaps they should be mentioned in the same article.

Many people who are interested in table setting to-day have not always been interested. Some of them have no accumulation of old family possessions, some have no conception that such possessions would make charming centrepieces (and so leave them to waste their sweetness on the pantry shelves), some are not concerned about having a centrepiece of any originality. Of those who are, there may be silver lovers, glass lovers, pottery and china lovers; these last divided into modernistic, whimsical, and traditional taste.

No one needs to explain the modernistic movement to moderns, and tables (Continued on page 124)

MOUSSE INDIENNE

A tablespoonful of gelatin is softened in a small quantity of cold water, then dissolved over hot water, and two cupfuls of Casaba melon meat, sweetened and forced through a sieve, are added. This is beaten until it is cold. Two cupfuls of cream, whipped and flavoured with half a teaspoonful of almond extract, are combined with the melon mixture and turned into individual moulds, which are packed in salted ice and frozen for three hours. These are unmoulded on a platter, surrounded with brandy-flavoured whipped cream, sweetened as desired, and topped with preserved ginger

SUGAR NESTS

Balls scooped with a scooper from very hard ice-cream are placed in individual nests of spun-sugar and topped with candied violets or cherries. The nests are made by sifting two cupfuls of granulated sugar with a quarter of a teaspoonful of cream of tartar. Half a cupful of water is added, and the syrup is cooked until it will spin a thread. This is placed in a pan of cold water for a few seconds, then placed in warm water to keep the syrup malleable. Small, round wooden sticks are rubbed in oil, and one is held high in the left hand, while a fork is dipped into the liquid, up and over the stick, back and forth, quickly. While the threads are still warm, they may be shaped into nests

NATA FIESTA

Four egg yolks are beaten with three-quarters of a cupful of sugar, and two cupfuls of scalded milk are poured over. This mixture is cooked until sufficiently thick to adhere to a spoon, when a small lump of butter is added. The mixture is put through a sieve and beaten until cold, when two cupfuls of heavy cream, a cupful of crushed almond (Continued on page 124)

THE STRAIGHT TOP-COAT

- Distinguished and practical for autumn days in the country is this four-piece suit, in beige and yellow, with a tweed coat and skirt, a yellow jersey jacket, and crêpe de Chine blouse; from Jay-Thorp
- Chanel designed this faintly checked suit in two shades of grey. The wrist-length jacket is slightly flared, and there is a sleeveless vest that is edged with white piqué; from Saks-Fifth Avenue
- Selvage edges are featured in this unusual straight-line top-coat of red tweed, also by Chanel. The raised waist-line is smartly indicated by the zigzag of the selvage bands; Mrs. Franklin, Inc.

- The jumper dress returns to fashion in this grey-and-blue tweed ensemble with a white crêpe de Chine blouse trimmed with tiny scallops. The full-length coat has a collar of grey kid caracal; Altman
- The knit frock is an important member of the smart woman's country wardrobe. The tailored model in the centre, in grey, has coin dots in a darker grey and a gilet of white piqué; from Bonwit Teller
- Sharp contrast is an excellent autumn note and especially so in this bright emerald-green wool voile dress with attached green-and-brown scarf and dark brown jacket of tweed; Saks-Fifth Avenue

VOGUE GOES SHOPPING

AT this time of year, there always seems to be a lot of marrying and giving in marriage, and for those who are being torn asunder with the worry and the work and the wondering whether to choose lace or tulle for the veil, there is a new service, which has the whole exhausting, bewildering business docketed and put away in a file—in short, The Wedding Embassy, at 32 East Fifty-Seventh Street, run by Miss Marie Coudert Brennig, who gets around to the smartest weddings herself and knows just what is what.

This establishment will wrest an alluring trousseau for you out of the merchants, will plan your wedding reception, do all the arguing with the florist, and even arrange your wedding trip to Tasmania, Siberia, or whatever corner of the globe has caught your fancy, thus removing tickets from your attention. And may I add in large capitals, there is no charge to the bride for any of this, which fact, even if she accepts it as part of the rosy atmosphere that envelops her, Papa, at any rate, will appreciate. Anybody who has ever been married will realize the saving of wear and tear on nerves such a service as this would provide and will wish she had saved getting married for This Year of Grace 1930.

• The accompanying article tells about some of the discoveries Vogue has made recently while snooping around the shops. We've been east-side, west-side, all around the town, and we have scads more information, all equally exciting. So, if you have any shopping problems, why not write us about them?

JAY-THORPE

• Before I stop shooting my pencil off about weddings, I should like to observe in large succulent polysyllables that I think the bride who has her wedding-gown made at Herman Patrick Tappé's is a lucky girl. Besides getting a wedding-dress that can be variously described as "glamorous," "picturesque," "quaint," or just good old "smart," according to the type she picks, she will also receive a beguiling little mail-box for her new domicile, with intoxicating little cupids and billets-doux painted on the outside. This is a charming and quite touching offering, it seems to me, besides being what less sentimental and more material-minded individuals would call getting your money's worth.

• Turning with shouts of mercenary glee to that oasis for the well-dressed impoverished, the well-dressed parsimonious, and the well-dressed with explorer's hankering, Macy's, I shall now dive into a paean of praise for their Accessory Shop, which is more or less bringing coals to whatever that place is where they don't need any.

But what I mean is they have just everything you crave in the way of gadgets and what-nots, for so little it's a shame not to walk off with at least half the shop. They have, for instance, a Worth bag that made me quite dizzy with predatory desires; it is big and roomy in a casual sort of way, banded (Continued on page 134)

FOUR MODELS FROM MACY'S

• Smart for street wear or, later, to wear under a top-coat is this dress of brown madiana cloth with a beige crêpe collar and a beige buckle on the brown leather belt. It is beautifully fitted, and the wrapped effect is particularly smart this season. Priced at less than forty dollars, this useful dress is an excellent choice for the woman whose income is limited

• Every wardrobe, large or small, needs an informal dinner-dress—a type of costume that most women wear even more than their formal evening gowns. A charming example is the dress shown at the left, of dark red lace with a double girdle of velvet in dark red and French-nude. The bolero back and flattering sleeves are smart, and the cost is under fifty dollars

• A suit is indispensable to the woman with few clothes, for it serves for travel, for spring and autumn wear, and at many other times. A very chic model costing less than forty-five dollars is this of light brown moussa cloth with a tucked gilet made of white linen. Other blouses and sweaters in harmonizing shades will lend variety to the model and to the wardrobe

• This afternoon frock is of dark brown satin—a material that will figure prominently in smart daytime wardrobes this autumn. A graceful bow ties at one shoulder, another on the opposite hip, and the neck-line is particularly becoming. The beauty of the fabric makes this dress seem moderately priced, for it may be obtained at less than seventy dollars

SMART FASHIONS FOR LIMITED INCOMES

THIS being the year for census taking, Vogue has emulated the government and gathered together a few statistics. A penthouse to penthouse campaign was made, and, at each door, the smartest woman present (who was seldom the richest woman) was asked just what her clothes philosophy was. We have become dangerously complacent since finding out that the statistics corroborate what we have always thought; which is, that there isn't a woman in the country who is rich enough to afford bad materials in her clothes. There are not many who can afford wardrobes based on more than two or three colours. There are almost none who can not have a costume suitable for each occasion. There is one in a million who has so much money that she need not plan her wardrobe before buying it.

The most extravagant and least useful dresses are invariably those bought under the pressure of a sudden change in the weather, a journey, or a grand invitation.

As we said, we were becoming dangerously complacent; every one agreed with us; we could retire to our fireside and play ping-pong the rest of our life—but—just as we were going down in the lift we suddenly realized our mistake—, we had talked only to the woman who was really well dressed.

We looked around for a badly dressed woman. There one was, an acquaintance, whom, for convenience, we shall call Mrs. E.

We asked her to tell us her philosophy of dress. (Continued on page 110)

WANAMAKER

- Canton crêpe fashions this smart dress in Lucerne-green, a colour that looks well with a darker green coat or one in the red-browns that will be so chic. The jabot and buckle are in egg-shell, and the skirt is beautifully designed. The cost is under fifty dollars
- This dark brown kashmerita coat with a brown Persian lamb collar has a new silhouette with restrained lines that will be in the mode for several seasons. The price is less than one hundred and eighty dollars

- The black evening dress is the most useful in the evening wardrobe, for one can wear it many times without tiring of it or feeling that it has lost its freshness. The very chic model at the right is of black velvet and is beautifully fitted. The moulded bodice is cut very low in back, draped at the waist, and the skirt falls to the instep. The price is under seventy dollars

DESIGNS FOR PRACTICAL DRESSMAKING

COAT No. 5413—Forstmann's Kashmirita, a new dull broadcloth in black, fashions this coat with a collar of black galiak fur joined to the edge of the lapels. Seamings and a bolero back are featured. The set-in sleeves have flared cuffs. Designed for sizes 32 to 46

COAT No. 5412—Beaver is used on this attractive coat of Forstmann's wool velvet in green, to trim the one-sided lapel that continues in a collar at the other side. The sleeves are set into deep armholes and are tight at the wrists. Designed for sizes 14 to 20

COAT No. S3454—A beaver collar is a smart trimming for the fine, pebbly surface of this dark red Bochmann wool coat. There are seamings in the back, and the raglan sleeves flare above fitted wrists. The shawl collar is one-sided. Designed for sizes 32 to 44

THE FIRST PRINCIPLES FOR A WELL PLANNED WINTER WARDROBE

BY THIS time, our wardrobe for winter is no longer a remote prospect, but a matter for serious consideration in the immediate present. In the next few weeks, we will be acquiring the clothes that are to make us happy or miserable until spring. Let us learn our lesson well at the start, paying particular attention to the designs in this section. They constitute the "back-bone" items, and they reflect the most significant fashion features of a very smart year.

First, a word about colours and fabrics. For town wear, nothing is smarter than black, especially when it is relieved by a dash of white, but dark and reddish-browns, blackish-greens, and dark reds and blues have great chic, also. Burnt-orange and rusty ochre are excellent for the open air. As to fabrics, your town coat will probably be of dull broadcloth or one of the new heavy, crêpy wools that are so smart. For dresses, as the wools grow sheerer, the silks grow heavier, each imitating the other, and both are liable to be façonné or finely patterned, in a new way. The recently revived satins are most important.

As soon as the basic colour scheme of your wardrobe has been decided upon, we come to that most-important-of-all garment—the coat. It establishes the key-note, and the rest must harmonize with it, for only by carrying out the ensemble idea in every detail can one be really well-dressed. This year, it will be an inch or so longer; it will be belted; it will probably have a deep, wrapped effect; it will widen slightly at the hem. Flat fur is the newest trimming. All of these points are illustrated in the models shown on these two pages.

Runabout dresses are simple and softly tailored and show the same general silhouette, with a great deal of emphasis laid on sleeves. Afternoon frocks are more formal, with quiet elegance. And, in the evening, the story is complete. There are heavier, richer fabrics—lamés, satins, velvets, and crêpes; colours that are rich and gleaming—and the same feeling of being gracious ladies.

COAT No. 5411—A very distinguished coat, made of Forstmann's Chonga in brown, has a becoming cape shawl collar that continues to the waist-line in back, where it is stitched over the belt. The coat has a wrapped front, and the belt is fastened with a large square buckle at the side—a new and interesting effect. The sleeves have shaped cuffs. This coat is excellent for town or country. Designed for sizes 14 to 20

DAY AND EVENING MODES

TO START THE NEW SEASON

Evening Wrap No. 5403—This is the new knee-length wrap, strikingly fashioned of Cheney's peony-red transparent velvet and black fox fur. Designed for sizes 32 to 46

Frock No. S3453 (Two views)—Several new autumn features appear on this frock: its black satin fabric, double-tiered skirt, white crêpe underblouse, and overblouse with bolero back. Set-in sleeves. Designed for sizes 14 to 20

Evening Frock No. S3452—The one-sided idea, expressed in a radiating gored section, gives a new look to this white dress of Mallinson's Klimax satin. Red carnations are a vivid splash of colour. Designed for sizes 14 to 20

Evening Frock No. 5402—Petal shoulder-straps, a princesse line, and a flared skirt assure the success of this crêpe frock of Onondaga's Onomaine. Designed for sizes 32 to 44

Ensemble No. S3455—Many of the newest features of the season are evident in this three-piece suit of Haas's wine-red Orientale, shown also at the right, below, without the jacket. The coat has shaped fronts and fur trimming, and the satin blouse has a simulated bolero. Designed for sizes 14 to 20

Frock No. 5406—White galiak fur collar and cuffs make this model of Forstmann's black Orioncrêpe a very effective frock for wear during the autumn. Designed for sizes 32 to 44

Frock No. 5404—This tunic frock has an original colour combination—a blue-fox canton crêpe tunic and a Patou-brown skirt. The sleeves are set in. Designed for sizes 32 to 44

Frock No. 5405—Green crêpe, Onondaga's Ononda, is used for this one-piece frock with deep armholes, epaulet shoulders, a narrow, buckled belt, and a tie. Designed for sizes 14 to 20

A favorite since Colonial days ~ ~ ~ Philadelphia PEPPER POT

No wonder Pepper Pot was the favorite soup of the substantial old Philadelphia Colonial gentry whence it originated. A thick, luscious soup, hale and hearty in its appeal; savory and gratifying to eager appetites.

Campbell's is the real Philadelphia Pepper Pot, made according to a famous old Colonial recipe. One look into its inviting depths, the first hearty spoonful is invitation enough to enjoy its unique savor again and again.

First, the stock, rich, velvety smooth and bland, brimming with bits of delicious meat. Literally loaded with diced carrots, potatoes and those wholesome macaroni dumplings. And quaintly seasoned with ground whole black peppercorns, and those famous old potherbs, sweet marjoram, parsley, savory thyme and sweet pimientos.

Here is a soup your appetite remembers, truly a dish to set before hungry men. Your grocer can supply you. 12 cents a can.

"THE HUNT CLUB"

The distinguished new 1931 Sterling inspired by the traditional elegance of the Hunt Breakfast

The New "HUNT CLUB" Sterling is as smart for the intimate dinner as for the most formal entertaining. Dinner knife and fork and tablespoon shown.

Coming home after the hunt at Harford—
Harry I. Nicholas, M. F. H., in the lead.

Masters of these Famous Hunts

*Harford... Middleburg
Norfolk... Onwentsia*

...are now using the "Hunt Club"

Sterling in their beautiful country estates

Gorham artists designed this beautiful punch bowl as a trophy for the Autumn race meeting of the fashionable Harford
Hunt at Monkton, Maryland.

IN the sparkling elegance of the Hunt Breakfast, Gorham artists have found inspiration for this suave, distinguished new Sterling—the "Hunt Club."

Already, masters of the smartest hunts in America are using the "Hunt Club" pattern in entertaining at their magnificent country estates.

Among these renowned sportsmen-hosts are Harry I. Nicholas, Esq., Joint Master of Fox Hounds of the famed Harford Hunt—Daniel C. Sands, Esq., Master of Middleburg—Henry G. Vaughan, Esq., Master of Norfolk—Austin N. Niblack, Esq., Master of the Onwentsia Hunt.

Like the ceremonial of the hunt, Gorham's new "Hunt Club" is in the high tradition, inheriting from the elegance of silver created in the days of great manors and princely hospitality. Yet its clear, cool simplicity of line is as unimpeachably modern as the smart men and women who today ride to hounds.

When you see the "Hunt Club" Sterling at your own jeweler's, you will appreciate the elegance of decorative detail—notice in each lovely line the mark of the master... in subtle, long curve of knife handle... lovely contour of spoon bowl... delicate fluting of stem.

Yet Gorham's "Hunt Club" is quite within your means, for a complete service for eight may be bought for only $227. Beautiful hollow ware to match is also moderately priced. Each piece is identified by the name "Gorham" on the back or base.

Your own jeweler will gladly give you a beautifully illustrated 18-page booklet, "The Hunt Club," showing all the popular pieces in the new 1931 Gorham Sterling. Or send this coupon to The Gorham Company, Dept. J-10, Providence, R. I.

ON HER DRESSING-TABLE

THERE is, in every country, a small group of experienced specialists in beauty who are known only to their own exclusive followings. Indeed, these specialists are regarded so much in the light of "finds" that their clients are inclined to keep their names carefully to themselves, and their work and preparations are not known to the general public. Such a specialist is Lola Casnati, who, by her unique methods and preparations has created for herself a distinguished clientele and has sold her preparations only directly from her New York office in East Fifty-Fifth Street. Now, the fundamental items in her series of preparations, four in number, are to be introduced in a limited number of shops.

A BEAUTY QUARTET

The first of these preparations is "Émirante," a cleansing liquid which is wonderfully refreshing and stimulating, but which possesses just enough of a bland oil to keep it from having a drying effect. It removes all make-up and soil swiftly and thoroughly, penetrating into the pores and purging them of unclean content by dissolving hardened matter and dirt. This tonic cleanser has the appearance of liquid emeralds, and, surely, if emeralds had a fragrance, it would be the clear, minty one of "Émirante."

"Crème Pénetrante" is a smooth, penetrating cream which gives an immediate impression of perfect blending—all of these preparations convey even to the lay person an idea of purity and fineness—and which is intended to penetrate beneath the surface and impart nourishment and vitality to the underlying tissues. It is allowed to remain on at night, after the skin has been carefully cleansed. "Cypris" is a milky liquid with a very light fragrance that serves as a foundation for powder and protection for the skin. It leaves a smooth, pearly finish that seems a veritable part of the skin, rather than something that has been provided by a supplementary preparation.

The basis of all the Casnati treatments is a preparation known as "Fermo-Derm," which is of the consistency of heavy cream and is of two varieties, numbers 1 and 2, that are used to supplement each other. They are applied over the entire face, in four coats, one on top of the other. Full directions for use accompany these jars, and, as is always the case in corrective preparations, they should be read and followed carefully. This preparation has a remarkable faculty of reviving the skin. It draws impurities from the pores as though by a magnet and arouses the circulation, so that the complexion acquires a new glow and freshness.

The Casnati preparations include "Émirante," a cleansing liquid; "Crème Pénetrante," a cream for use at night; "Cypris," a finishing liquid; and "Fermo-Derm," a facial rejuvenator; Wanamaker

To be correctly applied at home, "Fermo-Derm" requires a camel's-hair brush, a full hour of time, and not a small original investment of money, but it is one that yields a satisfying return in results. These Casnati preparations are available at Wanamaker's, in New York, and at the toilet-goods counters in a number of leading department shops throughout the country.

Eye make-up, which has hitherto been regarded as rather a special department of cosmetics, for that somewhat limited number of people who could "get away with it" well, has, to-day, become an accepted part of smart maquillage, and women are adding eye shadow and eyelash darkener to their list of indispensable cosmetics. Maybelline, one of the pioneer firms in creating eye make-up, has introduced a new group of eye shadows in paste form. This is available in black, brown, green, and blue, in trim metal cases with mirrors in the top. Remember, in choosing your colour, that the shade that complements the natural shadows beneath the eyes, rather than matches the shade of the eyes themselves, gives the most flattering effect. The Maybelline eyebrow pencil is in a practical, economical guise, since its point is renewed by removing a strip of the outer wrapping at the end, in the manner that is employed with large coloured pencils, and the liquid eyelash colouring is clear and lasting. These are obtainable in any number of shops.

A VERSATILE SALON

In many of the successful hair salons, the personal following of the head of the establishment has created the nucleus of success, and the impression of personal service is carried throughout every phase of the work. Such is the case in the salon of Paul of Fifth Avenue, where each client has the satisfactory feeling of being assured, not only of excellent service, but of feeling entirely at home in a pleasant atmosphere. In this establishment, every latest example of permanent wave development is to be found. Here, among many others, is a machine that permits (Continued on page 138)

"Beauty is Romance" says M^{RS} BIDDLE STEWART

"Beauty is romance, and romance is youth! To cherish youth, to live for beauty is the sure way to make your heart's desire come true. A radiant young girl, a beautiful woman is a magnet for romance," says Mrs. Biddle Stewart.

CHARMING young favorite of society in New York and Philadelphia, Mrs. Biddle Stewart is so romantic that her friends call her the "Fairy Princess." Tall and slender, she has the idyllic beauty of youth.

You notice her exquisite complexion the moment you look at her . . . its enchanting ivory pallor in vivid contrast with the cherry of her lips.

"A fresh, clear, youthful skin," she says, "is essential to beauty," and it is true.

Of course she uses Pond's! For, as she says, "Pond's is the easiest method of home care."

"There is the delicious Cold Cream for cleansing," she adds, "to keep the skin flower-fresh and satin-smooth . . . the dainty Cleansing Tissues to remove the cream immaculately . . . the bracing Skin Freshener to banish oiliness and bestow a lovely natural color . . . and the exquisite Vanishing Cream for powder base—a true hand-maiden of romance," says Mrs. Stewart with her winsome smile, "for it keeps one's nose from ever looking shiny—one's hands always velvet-white."

Yes, a lovely skin is truly the ensign of romance. That is why Pond's Method, with its four simple steps, is such a success.

During the day—first, for thorough cleansing, generously apply Pond's Cold Cream over face and neck, several times. Pat in with upward, outward strokes, waiting to let the fine oils sink into the pores, and float the dirt to the surface.

Second—wipe away all cream and dirt with Pond's Cleansing Tissues, soft, super-absorbent.

Third—dab skin with Pond's Skin Freshener to banish oiliness, close and reduce pores.

Last—smooth on Pond's Vanishing Cream for powder base, protection, exquisite finish.

At bedtime—never fail to cleanse with the Cold Cream and wipe away with Cleansing Tissues.

Lovely women use Pond's four delightful preparations to keep the skin always at its best . . . Cold Cream for cleansing . . . Cleansing Tissues to wipe away the cream . . . Skin Freshener to do away with oiliness . . . Vanishing Cream for exquisite powder base.

"I haven't any," she said. "It depresses me to think of clothes. You can't dress well without a lot of money."

"But you do wear clothes," we argued.

"Yes," she replied, "I need some right now, but I haven't time to go all around town looking for them, nor can I afford to go to the expensive places. I suppose, this year, I'll just buy the first thing I see, as usual. I saw a pretty hat yesterday, which was new looking. It was black velvet with a large turquoise bow to one side."

"What colour is your winter coat?" we asked.

"Why, I don't know," she replied. "I shan't need one for a month, but I think I'll get brown. It looks best on me since I have brown eyes."

"Of course, you'll get another coat to wear with the black-and-blue hat," we said.

"Why, no. I can afford only one," she replied.

"And yet, you would buy a hat you can wear only a month," we cried.

Our victim hung her head, we felt cheerful—our life work was not finished.

"Meet us at ten to-morrow," we said. "You're coming shopping with us."

"Where?" she asked, badly frightened.

"Nowhere you haven't been before," we replied. "To the department shops, but, like generals, we shall plan our campaign first. You must think carefully and tell us how you expect to spend the winter."

On the way downtown, next morning, she told us that she looked after her housekeeping, went shopping every day, lunched with women friends, played bridge, went to the theatre, and occasionally to a dance or a concert. Sometimes, she and her husband visited her parents in a near-by city.

We decided on brown as the dominant colour for her daytime wardrobe, since it is not only becoming to her, but very smart this autumn.

Our first and most important purchase was her winter coat, which we found at Stern's. She was delighted at being able to buy one for less than one hundred and eighty dollars. It is made of heavy kashmerita in a very dark shade of brown and has a warm, wide collar of brown Persian lamb, which is one of the smartest furs this season. The silhouette is straight, although it is really cut to fit the figure slightly at the waist-line. The restraint and lack of exaggeration shown in the design will make it wearable for several seasons. (This model is illustrated on page 97.)

At first, she wanted to buy another coat that was equally smart, but we persuaded her to reject it because the sleeve was complicated by a wide band of fur applied at the elbow. This made it impractical to wear a second or third winter, since the fur would become rubbed and the sleeve would be too easily remembered as of this season's vintage. (Continued on page 114)

BEAUTY FOR YOU..

HELENA RUBINSTEIN has just returned from Paris with new notes on make-up and interesting information on how to overcome the penalties of exposure—dry, parched skin, squint lines, the weatherbeaten look. She invites you cordially to visit her at her Salons for consultation... If your summer sojourn has meant health at the expense of your beauty, you will welcome this opportunity for authoritative and timely advice.

If you have let the sun age your skin, and life steal the bloom from your beauty, there is one who can reclaim for you your youth and loveliness, one whose name is a symbol of beauty throughout the world—Helena Rubinstein.

Helena Rubinstein brings you beauty swiftly, surely, for she has devoted her life to studying skins and their reactions to climate the world over and she has discovered scientific answers to their every need.

The instant you use her celebrated creams and lotions, you sense their beauty-building powers. You feel them molding relaxed contours back to youth, clarifying the pores and youthifying starved tissues. You know that they are awakening your beauty!

If you are beauty-wise you will put these creations to the test. For only then will you benefit by them and only then can you realize why in a world overcrowded with beauty preparations, the creations of Helena Rubinstein remain supreme!

Helena Rubinstein has outlined below a number of treatments which are as interesting as they are efficient. Among them you will find the answers to your beauty needs.

The Lady Patricia

At last! . . the pen women have always wanted — Waterman's Lady Patricia

A pen lovely as her jewels! Smart as her costume • First and foremost, it's a woman's pen. Created and styled for her smaller grip—her sense of nicety—her costume requirements. A pen as fine as men enjoy in Waterman's Patrician. A smart, modern clasp replaces the masculine clip—locates the Lady Patricia instantly in even the most crowded handbag—and adds immeasurably to this pen's good looks.

Women demand not only efficiency, but something they are proud to carry around with them. And so the Lady Patricia was designed!

Feminine as her powder puff, colorful as her costume jewels—a true Waterman's for service, with pen point to suit any hand!

Why women want to get their hands on Lady Patricia • it pops right into a handbag, and clasps securely in the neatest way • it has a modern clasp—very decorative, (not like the clip on a man's pen!) • it has a shorter cap, and a barrel formed to a woman's grip • it comes in the charming colors that look best with women's costumes.

In Persian—a flame and emerald and purple composition with all the fire of a fine black opal.

In Jet—Night black with sparkling trim—always a stunning combination—always in the height of good taste.

In Onyx—a soft creamy background with tawny henna markings etched against it.

The Lady Patricia is boxed charmingly at $5.00. And a small graceful pencil to match is $3.00.

AN UNCARED-FOR SKIN IS THE EASY PREY OF WRINKLES

SHE had a pretty face, but such a heedless young head! She gave her skin the most haphazard care. She wouldn't spend five minutes a day to keep her youth. Soon there came fine little lines at the corners of her eyes and mouth. And while she was beginning to think that perhaps she might do something about them—some day—those little lines swiftly spread and deepened into ugly wrinkles, obstinate wrinkles that made her look old.

That is what always happens if you neglect your skin. Wrinkles have no respect for youth. They snatch away beauty whenever they find it unguarded. Wrinkles are not caused by time alone. You can keep your face smooth and lineless despite the passing years, if you will only give your skin a little daily care.

Dorothy Gray evolved scientific preparations that ward off the ageing wrinkles. These preparations have proved successful in actual treatment in the Dorothy Gray salons. So that you may readily use them at home, these same preparations are sold at leading shops everywhere. Ask or write for the Dorothy Gray booklet on scientific home care of the skin. And begin, tonight, using: Dorothy Gray Cleansing Cream, Dorothy Gray Special Mixture (if your skin is normal or dry), or Tissue Cream (if your skin is oily or your face plump), or Special Skin Cream (if your face and throat are thin), the Dorothy Gray Patter, Dorothy Gray Texture Lotion.

FASHIONS FOR LIMITED INCOMES

She promised that, if she felt an irresistible urge for something extreme in the future, it would be a hat, never a coat, the most expensive item in a wardrobe.

She demurred a bit when we told the taxi driver that Macy's was our next stop.

"I know it's a splendid shop," she said. "But it's so vast that I feel confused there. Trying to find a frock among so many is like looking for four-leaf clovers."

"Macy has thought of that, too," we countered. "And that's why we're going to the department that is known as 'The Little Shop.' There, you will see excellent copies of French models, as well as Macy's own designs at prices no husband could object to. Tucked away up one side on the third floor, one may sit in a comfortable armchair and have a cigarette while seeing the models."

TO GO UNDER THE COAT

For Mrs. E. to wear, first as an autumn street dress and later under her top-coat, we bought a dress of light brown madiana cloth with a collar and touches in beige, beautifully fitted, and belted with brown leather (illustrated on page 96). The cuffs are particularly intriguing since they may be worn open to give a graceful flared movement at the wrist or trimly wrapped around and buttoned. Its price was less than forty dollars.

For the afternoon, we chose a dress of brown satin as dark as her coat, with a graceful bow of the material on one shoulder and another at the waist (also shown on page 96). A choker of yellow crystal will give a bright colour note. The price was low for a frock of such beautiful material, being less than seventy dollars.

Her next need was for a dress to wear when dining at home and on occasions when she did not wish to feel really dressed. A frock of dark red lace, double belted with red and nude coloured velvet, was exactly right and cost less than fifty dollars. It is made ankle length and has a bolero and charming short sleeves. We decided that a coral necklace would lend chic since it would echo the light colour note at the waist-line. (This is shown at the left on page 96.)

"What am I to wear right away?" the doubtful Mrs. E. demanded. "I haven't anything for the trip to Boston next week."

"A suit, of course," we replied. "We consider that one is absolutely indispensable to the woman with few clothes. It may be worn on the street during the autumn and the spring. It is needed for travelling. Worn with a sweater, it serves in the country and, with a smart blouse, for luncheons in town."

We selected one on the spot (it cost less than forty-five dollars) of moussa cloth in a shade of brown lighter than the top-coat, but suitable to wear under it, particularly as two tones of the same colour will be much used this winter. (This is illustrated next to the right on page 96.) A beautifully made gilet of handkerchief linen came with it, but Mrs. E. will also buy a pull-on sweater in brown and yellow, which we saw priced at less than fifteen dollars among the large and gay assortment at Dobbs. A silk muffler checked in brown and topaz, worn folded like a stock, will give a chic accent to this costume.

Since she likes to sew, she will find further variety by making a blouse of beige satin by Vogue pattern No. 5381. Really well made blouses are necessarily expensive in the shops, and, since hand-work is a new note in autumn fashions, it is the greatest of economies to make one's blouses at home.

With the help of a dressmaker, Mrs. E. is going to make, also, her own black velvet evening wrap by Vogue pattern No. 5403. She could never afford one of a fine material unless she did, and a wrap is not difficult to fit. The collar will be of soft white lapin, which she can buy by the yard at Stern's or Lord and Taylor's. If every one realized how easily and inexpensively an evening wrap can be made, no woman would ever be seen incongruously dressed in an evening frock and a daytime coat.

Before leaving Macy's, Mrs. E. bought two pairs of brown hand-stitched suede gloves long enough to wrinkle over the cuffs of her sleeves. They are copies of those made by Worth and cost one-fourth of what is paid for the originals in Paris.

In the millinery salon on the second floor, she ordered a dark brown beret, which will be fitted to her head. It will cost less than fifteen dollars. She is overjoyed, since she had never believed before that you could have a hat made to order without mortgaging the old homestead.

FOR FORMAL EVENINGS

We went next to Wanamaker's to look for an evening dress, which will be the only one in Mrs. E.'s wardrobe, but which she won't mind wearing many times, as it is made of black velvet and is so well fitted that she looks her best in it. The bodice is moulded to her figure, and the skirt falls in graceful folds to her instep. The bodice is gathered and draped at the waist-line in the back and is cut very low. We were greatly relieved to find that the price was less than seventy dollars, for, after trying it on, Mrs. E. would have been miserable without it. (It is shown at the right on page 97.)

We also found a dress of canton crêpe in Lucerne-green, which tones beautifully with the brown top-coat. Mrs. E. really could get along very well without this extra dress, but she looked so charming in it that we yielded to her arguments. She reminded us of how little she had paid for the other frocks and that the same accessories would do for them all. Besides, it cost under fifty dollars. (It is shown beside the coat on page 97.)

Her allusion to accessories reminded us that she had not, as yet, bought any shoes, but when we started forth in search of them, our heretofore gentle pupil refused to follow and turned into Stetson's shop on Madison Avenue. We followed her and were delighted that we had, for it meant a discovery. Of course, we had always known that Stetson made practical daytime shoes, but we did not realize that it was possible to find there copies and adaptations from the best French bootmakers, such as Ducerf-Scavini, Marouf, and Julienne. We questioned the clerk and found that this new development is due to the excellent taste of Miss Marion Taylor, one of the leading fashion experts of the country, who selected the models for this new line of Stetson shoes.

For general use, we selected low-cut Oxfords in very dark brown calfskin with solid leather heels and, for afternoon, opera pumps of brown kid. Neither pair (Continued on page 126)

Studebaker's epochal contribution to motoring

STUDEBAKER's seasoned, champion Eights have literally captured America with the thrill of Free Wheeling, Studebaker's newest and greatest contribution to motoring pleasure and economy. Only Studebaker, in the new President and Commander Eights, offers Free Wheeling with positive gear control. It is manufactured under Studebaker patents.

You use the clutch only to start or back up . . . you shift at any speed—forty, fifty miles an hour—back and forth between high and second, and never touch the clutch!

You find nothing new to learn—nothing to un-learn. The full braking power of the engine is always available, when desired.

Free Wheeling saves 12 to 20 per cent of gasoline, 20 per cent of oil—even more in heavy traffic or on hills. Tires wear longer. Chassis strains are far less, hence chassis life is greater.

Free Wheeling performance is matched by coachcraft of arresting grace—by greater power, longer wheelbases, and richer, more spacious interiors.

Try Free Wheeling with positive gear control—an achievement of Studebaker's 78 years of manufacturing progress. Nobody can tell you but one ride will sell you Free Wheeling.

WOMEN AND THEIR ARCHITECTS

house are established by choosing the lesser of two evils; that is, they do not permit of a perfect solution in relation to some other problem. For example, the perfect window has never been designed. Double-hung windows are never as agreeable or efficient as casements in very hot weather; casements that open in are almost sure to leak in our rigorous climate and are apt to interfere with curtains when they are open; while windows that open out involve the annoyance of opening the screen whenever one wishes to get at them and can not be made very large on account of the dangers of high winds. A serious technical study of these problems would bring to light a great many more difficulties and would fill a great many pages. It suffices to say here that a compromise of some kind is the only solution; and yet some women have the greatest difficulty in hiding what they are generally intelligent enough to recognize as an unreasonable sense of pique when confronted with such limitations.

The client may wonder why she has to concern herself with certain technical matters at what may seem a very early stage of the work, but the slight impatience that may arise over the really careful consideration of these problems is not serious compared to the annoyance at having to spend money on subsequent modifications and changes.

TOO LITERAL REPRODUCTIONS

Many a woman has suffered the experience of asking her guests to sleep in a room that she guiltily knows to be suffocating, simply because she has demanded from her architect a replica of a Cape Cod farmhouse and because he, lacking the courage to point out certain truths, has carried out his task in a spirit of literal obedience and designed tiny double-hung windows. Had he, on the other hand, at the risk of seeming didactic, been outspoken enough to remind his client that the early Cape Cod settlers were not concerned with summer warmth, but with protecting themselves from the long, bitter winters, and had hence deliberately made their windows small, the lady in question would at least have been forewarned as to the dangers of copying too faithfully a bygone style. It is the task of the architect to put before his client the basic difficulties, the choices offered, and the sacrifices each choice entails and to see that the client has realized them fully before the work proceeds at all far.

Few people realize the tremendous advantage of having sketches and drawings made over a long period before they intend to build a house. Not only is the architect benefited by the opportunity it gives him to study the needs of his client and find the best solution for them, but the client is able to consider carefully the various practical demands she has made and discover whether they are compatible with the character of architecture that appeals to her; in short, to make up her mind about those things that must be definitely decided before a contract can be let. It is undeniable that, while they are planning their houses, women are influenced by things they have seen in museums or in the houses of their friends, and their momentary enthusiasm tempts them to ask the architect to incorporate these fragments from here and there into one house. Under such circumstances, it will not be surprising if the house lacks the feeling of unity that above all others it should possess. It is impossible to design anything more than a trick house if a client insists on a different style in every room, no matter how perfect each room may be, and yet the architect who expresses a reluctance to make such an assemblage is sometimes accused of possessing little versatility or is dismissed as a "purist."

There arrives a point in the creation of every house when interference with the architect is, to say the least, precarious. Generally speaking, unless the purse of the client is unlimited, this point is the signing of the contract with the builder. Up to such a time, changes and revisions involve a loss of temper at the worst, but, afterwards, they involve a great many dollars, as well. So true is this that some of the happiest clients to be found are those who have gone to Europe while their house was in the actual process of construction.

At the signing of the contract, the work moves into a technical realm with which the average layman is poorly acquainted, but the exact boundary of this realm is extremely difficult to determine. In the case of a portrait-painter, for instance, it is far simpler to define it. It is obvious that, after the sitter has decided on the costume she will wear and, if she chooses to, the pose in which she wishes to be painted, there is nothing more that she can do to control the result, and it would be manifestly ridiculous for her to step down from the model stand and guide the hand of the painter.

It is, of course, quite true that architects have often been prevented from making mistakes, even of a technical kind, through some happy suggestion or intervention of the client, but these errors should be discerned and corrected in the early stages of the work. A great many such mistakes could only indicate one thing—that the architect was inefficient or at least unsuited to carry out the particular commission entrusted to him. In either case, it is far better to terminate the relationship politely and start anew than it is to try to muddle through with the undertaking. If, on the other hand, in the preparatory stages of the work, the architect has justified faith in his artistic and technical ability; if he has shown in his sketches of the façade and interiors that he understands the character of house that is wanted; and by the arrangement of the plan that he is fully conversant with the utilitarian needs of his client—then it is the part of wisdom to remember that his work will possess far more originality and unity if he is left unhampered in its execution.

FEMININE CONSERVATISM

Future generations looking back at the domestic architecture of the present day, whatever they may have to say in praise of its refinement, will certainly be amazed at its timidity in design and its almost pathetic lack of inventiveness; and, when one considers that in a vast majority of cases it is the woman of the household and not the man who determines with the architect the appearance of our houses and apartments, it must be admitted that some of the blame for this timidity rests with the woman client of to-day. Women are notoriously more concerned with what other people will think than men, and it is not to their credit that they have allowed their fears of not being in "good taste" to get the upper hand to such an extent that they succeed in paralyzing the creative faculties of their architects by asking them to work in an absurdly limited aesthetic range. Entirely new, for those who wish the superlative in fine writing papers, this unusual Montag stationery recaptures the magnificence and the substance of the famous handmade papers of the Italian Renaissance.

Hold a sheet to the light—watermarked, in its fibres, is an authentic design that symbolizes the historical personage or period whose name the paper bears.

Offered in eight titles, in various pastel tints—Aquamarine, Tusk, Emerald, Diamond, and Flaxdown—each sheet and envelope having a feathery deckle on all four edges. The various box designs are made by an etching process so fine that many will frame the covers. You will find Montag's Historic Papers in quire boxes, at fine department stores and at better stationers and jewelers—ready for immediate use or for special monogramming. The Perfume of Romance

The greatest social event of the season—first night at the Operal Society in its gayest yet most artistic mood, converges to throng the most dazzling auditorium in America. Men of prominence in every walk of life. Ladies who have earned the title of “the most beautiful women in the world.” Here they are foregathered to hear the romantic masterpiece by Puccini—T O S C A.

No “first night” ever came so close to the hearts of sensitive women as TOSCA—the latest perfume creation which has captivated the European Continent. The hero of the evening, Cavaradossi, describes such an enticing fragrance when he sings “Strange harmony of contrasts deliciously blended.” And from Tosca perfume emanates that elusive something, peculiar to women of unusual charm.

Even before the eventful days of the Civil War

St. Marys Blankets graced many a hospitable home

To the traditional excellence derived from years of fine blanket making, St. Marys adds definite style leadership in the creation of new weaves and colorings of distinctly modern character and charm. . . . Fascinating two-tone combinations in such acceptable pastel arrangements as rose and gold (as in the "Tritoma" illustrated) . . . orchid and Nile . . . orchid and gold . . . blue and peach . . . blue and gold . . . Nile and gold . . . Nile and rose . . . with deep binding of lustrous satin ribbon to match.

LOVELY

St. Marys BLANKETS

Pastel shades, likewise, in solid colors, including modern panel stripe effects woven into the fabric itself. . . . Truly, a variety of beauty which lends new zest and interest to the choosing of blankets for your home. . . . Many of these newer things are available, too, at extremely moderate prices. Or, should you wish the utmost luxury in blankets, you will find these, too, in St. Marys, including blankets of pure camel's hair and of Tibetan Kashmir, the very loveliest blankets to be found.

THE ST. MARYS WOOLEN MANUFACTURING COMPANY ♦ ST. MARYS, OHIO

« For your convenience, a list of St. Marys dealers is printed on the following page »

This beautiful miniature blanket, for which you will find many uses, faithfully reveals the exquisite loveliness of St. Marys Blankets.

It may be obtained by sending twenty-five cents, to cover cost of mailing, to The St. Marys Woolen Manufacturing Co., St. Marys, Ohio.

IN this period of extravagant claims and doubtful price "concessions" it is important to remember that Shayne prices are influenced solely by the intrinsic value of the fur itself. We do not say, "Buy here because our furs used to be priced higher." Rather, we say, "... because our prices are always too low to permit reduction."

THESE WILL REPAIR THE WEATHERED SKIN

and there is a most amusing little patter to be used at home. We may seem a bit foolish at first, patting away at our faces as though life and beauty depended thereupon, but the glow and renewed freshness that result prove more than worth the effort. The rich oil and a special mixture cream to be left on at night are advised for use at home during the "after-summer" session, together with the patter, the oil cleansing cream, and a delicate astringent.

But suppose the skin is brown, and we want it white, with as little intervening sallowness as possible. In a tanned skin, the rays of the sun have penetrated through the epidermis, or outer skin, increasing the colour pigment and thereby darkening the complexion. Correspondingly, bleaching agents must reach the colour pigment and bleach it.

TO BLEACH A TAN

One of the various specialists who make a feature of restoring tanned skin to its pristine fairness is Helena Rubinstein. At her salons, patrons are advised that twelve treatments, supplemented by consistent efforts at home, carried out according to directions, will make their colour rival that of the lily. The Rubinstein bleaching preparations constitute a very inclusive group, and there are also special treatments for bleaching the hands and arms. At the salon, after the regulation cleansing, a liquid, alluringly known as "eau d'or," a preparation redolent of freshly crushed lemons, is applied to penetrate beneath the outer skin and stimulate as well as bleach. The massage is carried on with a bleaching cream, which is as soft as oil. This bleaching cream, incidentally, is a versatile preparation, in that it may be used at home as a cleanser, alternating with regulation cleansing cream, so that every step of beauty procedure will have some bleaching benefit. "Eau d'or" is also to be used at home, and a comment upon its efficiency is that clients are warned not to let it stray to their eyebrows, lest these become faded. Bleaching lotions of any kind should always be used in connection with creams, not water, so that they will not dry the skin. Two other preparations known as "application" creams, in that they are active in themselves and do not require any patting or massage, are a complexion bleach and a freckle cream, to be applied and allowed to remain on overnight during the bleaching process.

While the skin is in the process of losing its tan, a green powder in the evening will help to disguise any lingering brown tones, while daytime powder should move gradually away from its yellow cast, acquiring instead a rosy ochre shade, as the skin itself loses its yellowness. Rouge on the orange cast, that has proved such an effective complement to brown skin, should be discarded as soon as summer colour can be induced to fade away.

RESTORING CROWNS TO GLORY

While our skins were suffering under the annual attack, our hair was also figuring in the debacle. And though it may not appear as conspicuous as a weather-beaten complexion, hair that is streaked by the sun and made dry and brittle by the wind and the sea will not be hair that can be coiffed to smart advantage. So, when you are repairing the ravages, give a thought to "reconditioning" your hair.

"Reconditioning" is the word that the Ogilvie Sisters use to describe their treatment for summer-worn heads. When the hair is dry, the oil glands are not functioning properly. The scalp needs stimulation, and supplementary oils must be supplied before the hair can be lustrous and soft.

At the Ogilvie Sisters' salons and in all the places where their preparations are used in treatments, instructions are given so that the client can carry on her own repair work at home. If you can rely upon yourself to be conscientious, you need only take one salon treatment and then carry on by yourself. But, if you are one who is apt to relax in good-doing, after going to the extent of supplying yourself with equipment and directions, you had best put yourself in the hands of an experienced operator, and not desist from treatments until your hair has become a thing of life and lustre.

In these treatments for dry and lifeless hair, a tonic that normalizes and feeds the oil glands is applied all over the head and massaged in with a rotary movement of strong, skilful fingers that is a veritable benediction upon a worn-out scalp. Then, the hair is brushed and brushed and brushed, up and out, with one of the famous brushes intended for this purpose, until the drab, dull look seems to be actually brushed away. If the ends are dried and split, a touch of pomade will be applied upon them and perhaps a special shampoo preparation will be recommended, although the shampoo itself is not to be given more frequently than once a month. And thus will the crown of glory be restored to its regal state after its summer suffering!

THESE WILL BLEACH THE SUNBURNED SKIN

MY CREAM HAS A SINGULAR GIFT FOR MAKING YOUR SKIN

Clearer, healthier!

BY Frances Ingram

UNLIKE any other cream I know of, Milkweed Cream is devoted to skin health. It cares exquisitely for the surface of the skin—as do most fine cleansing creams—but that is just a part of its benefits. It has a wonderful faculty for correcting skin faults—it makes the skin smoother, clearer, as lovely as your own ideals for it.

The secret lies in Milkweed Cream's special ingredients—the delicate oils that cleanse so beautifully and the toning properties that sink deep into the pores to guard against lines and blemishes.

Using my mannequin as your model, scrutinize your skin at the six places starred. Then, realizing exactly your own needs, start tonight to have a healthier, lovelier skin. Never have you known a simpler method or one richer in its rewards.

The Milkweed Cream Way to Lovelier Skin

First, apply Milkweed Cream generously (precede by bathing with warm water and pure soap if your skin is oily). Leave the cream upon the skin a moment to allow its special cleansing and toning ingredients to penetrate the pores. Then pat off every bit. Next, apply a fresh film of Milkweed and, following the six starred instructions at the right, pat the cream gently into the skin.

* * *

Mark on your jar the date you start with my special Milkweed method. For you will be amazed to find how swiftly—under this healthful care—your skin improves in beauty. You will find Milkweed Cream at any drug or department store. It sells for 50¢, $1.00 and $1.75.

STUDY MY MANNEQUIN AND HER "STARS" TO KNOW WHY
"Only a healthy skin can stay young"

★ THE FOREHEAD—To guard against lines and wrinkles here, apply Milkweed Cream, stroking with fingertips, outward from the center of your brow.

★ THE MOUTH—Drooping lines are easily defeated by filming the fingertips with my cream and sliding them upward over the mouth and then outward toward the ears, starting at the middle of the chin.

★ THE EYES—If you would avoid aging crows' feet, smooth Ingram's about the eyes, stroke with a feather touch outward, beneath eyes and over eyelids.

★ THE THROAT—To keep your throat from flabbiness, cover with a film of Milkweed and smooth gently downward, ending with rotary movement at base of neck.

★ THE NECK—To prevent a sagging chin and a lined neck, stroke with fingertips covered with Milkweed from middle of chin toward the ears and patting firmly all along the jaw contours.

★ THE SHOULDERS—To have shoulders that are blemish-free and firmly smooth, cleanse with Milkweed Cream and massage with palm of hand in rotary motion.

set with plates, glasses, and ornaments in shapes of embryonic simplicity are not unusual and can be very beautiful. White peonies in a great bowl of egg-shell coloured faience, with plates in the same hue, and black-stemmed glasses have made a lovely showing on a faint pink damask cloth.

Figures and architectural designs in different potteries, chinass, and fine fire gilding make amusing small, or large formal, table ornamentation. For the great "décor de la table," looking-glass, gold trellis, gold urns, vases, candela-bra, and a central group of graceful figures might be used. One such, numbering thirty-five pieces, might easily have seemed small on the festive boards of our ancestors, while quaint little figurines—even birds and fruit in china—have made appropriate embellishment for our own intimate out-of-doors dinners.

In the illustrations on page 90, two beautiful examples of table garniture have been selected, rather formal in character, but suitable to almost any surrounding. The white tureen shown in the upper photograph is a reproduction in Nymphenburg ware of one of their old items. The urns, which oddly enough go very well with it, are of Flight Barr Worcester. The period is about 1800. With these are a plate of Spode, a reproduction, and English cut glass. The lower decoration is of china cupids, holding candles, and cupids holding a bowl for fruit. Dresden, these, with ormolu mounts. The plate is a reproduction in soft paste Sèvres, Louis Sixteenth period, and the glass is old French of the same period.

The desserts illustrated on page 91, which set off the various recipes given, are shown on Royal Dresden platters. They are (that boon to those whose chef does not exist or is taking a holiday) ready-to-serve desserts, supplied by the wonder-maker, Sherry. The recipes, on the contrary, are to be wonder-made at home.

DISTINCTIVE DESSERTS

macaroons, and vanilla and salt to taste are added. This is frozen in a melon-shaped mould, and when it is almost hard, it is uncovered, the centre is scooped out, and the cavity is filled with sliced, spiced peaches and grated pineapple. The cover is replaced, and the mould is repacked in salted ice for three hours.

CRÈME NARANSA

Five egg yolks are beaten with a cupful of sugar, and a cupful of scalded milk is poured over them. The custard is cooked until it is of a consistency to coat a spoon, when it is removed from the fire, and a teaspoonful of butter and an eighth of a teaspoonful of salt are added. This is beaten until cold, when one and a half cupfuls of orange-juice, a quarter of a cupful of lime-juice, and a tablespoonful of pineapple syrup are poured in. When this mixture is half frozen, a cupful of orange pulp and half a cupful of minced, spiced pecans are added, and the freezing is completed. It is allowed to stand two hours after freezing.

BOMBE RUSSE

A lemon ice is prepared by boiling together for five minutes three cupfuls of water, one and a quarter cupfuls of sugar, and a quarter of a cupful of glacé lemon peel. The mixture is allowed to cool slightly, after which half a cupful of lemon-juice is added, and the liquid is strained and frozen.

A round mould is lined with this mixture, filled with pistachio ice-cream, and repacked in ice until sufficiently frozen to keep its form.

The pistachio ice-cream is made by cooking two cupfuls of light cream for three minutes, adding a cupful of sugar and a pinch of salt, and allowing the mixture to cool. Two cupfuls of heavy cream are then added, and the mixture is beaten until it is cold, when a teaspoonful of pistachio extract and half a cupful of ground pistachio nuts are added. This is coloured with green vegetable colouring and frozen in the usual manner.

Bombe russe may be prepared in other colourful combinations, such as raspberry ice filled with strawberry ice-cream or blueberry ice filled with violet ice-cream. If one wishes to carry the colour scheme further, green peppermint creams, candied violets, or candied rose-leaves may be served, according, of course, to the colour of the bombe.

CRÈME GLACÉE

A blanc mange is prepared by softening four tablespoonfuls of corn-starch in half a cupful of milk. Three and a half cupfuls of milk and four ounces of sugar are brought almost to a boiling point in a double boiler, and the softened corn-starch is added, stirring constantly. This is cooked for four minutes and cooled slightly, when a teaspoonful of vanilla extract is added. The blanc mange is then poured into two shallow, buttered pans and allowed to chill until it is set.

A raspberry gelatin is prepared by softening two tablespoonfuls of gelatin in half a cupful of cold water. A cupful and a half of red raspberry-juice are scalded, after which a cupful and a half of water are added, and the mixture is brought to the boiling-point, when it is poured over the softened gelatin. Three-quarters of a cupful of sugar and two teaspoonfuls of lemon-juice are then added, and the gelatin is turned into a pan of the same size as those used for the blanc mange. When the gelatin is partly set, half a cupful of chopped candied pears and a quarter of a cupful of chopped candied cherries are added. When the gelatin is unmoulded, it is placed between the two layers of blanc mange. Green-tinted sweetened whipped cream adds to the decorative effect. This should be served very cold.

While for the freezing for these recipes, a freezer is indicated, the refrigerating unit of an electric refrigerator can be used whenever desired.

“Kleenex is the only safe way to remove face creams and make-up”

Helen Morgan

She started all America singing “Can’t help lovin’ that man”... she played in some of the greatest successes Ziegfeld has ever known . . . and she tells you here how she protects the beauty that made her famous.

YOU saw her in “Show Boat,” didn’t you? And if you are human—and feminine—you must have wondered how she preserves her creamy skin and cool, magnolia beauty.

Well—take a peep into her dressing room! Right past the doorman, into the star’s own inner sanctum! And here we find her, cleansing her skin . . . with Kleenex!

“Kleenex is always on my dressing table,” she says. “It’s the only safe and sanitary way to remove face creams and make-up. Soft and absorbent, it wipes away but does not scratch or stretch the skin.”

You see, Helen Morgan knows the importance of proper cleansing. So she uses Kleenex.

Kleenex is powerfully absorbent. It blots up . . . not only every trace of cream and oil . . . but embedded dirt and cosmetics.

Women everywhere are rapidly adopting the Kleenex way of removing cold cream. Kleenex is so sanitary. It’s so much safer than germ-filled “cold cream cloths” or towels. And far less expensive.

Kleenex comes in white, and in three safe, lovely tints, at all drug and department stores.

For handkerchiefs, too

More and more people are using Kleenex to replace handkerchiefs. It is especially valuable during colds, to avoid reinfection. The tissues are incredibly soft, gentle and soothing. Use just once, then discard. Cold germs are discarded, too. And unpleasant laundering avoided!

cost as much as fifteen dollars. We saw attractive slippers of suède, but decided that they would not look their best as long as the kid ones.

Stetson does not sell evening shoes, so we went to the excellent shoe department at Lord and Taylor's for a well-cut pair of slender black satin opera pumps. For these, too, we paid less than fifteen dollars.

By now it was growing late, so, after saying good-bye to Mrs. E. (who looked as cheerful as every one did before the break in the market), we went home. Dusk was falling; it was cooler now in the evenings; there would soon be a fire burning in our grate; we had convinced the last heretic. The telephone rang, and a voice asked if it were speaking to Vogue.

"Who is it?" we parried. "You don't know me," said the voice. "And I'm afraid my clothes problems are too small to trouble you with, I have such a limited income. But I hoped—"

We smiled—already we were making plans. She mistook our silence.

"Central," she said. "I have a bad connection. I wanted to speak to Vogue."

"So you are!" we interrupted. "Come right over; you have the right number!"

our modern interiors have become, in the hands of women, not the innate and soberly evolved expression of a new mode of living, but a hastily adopted fashion of necessarily superficial values.

In the past, it was usually the man of the family who concerned himself with the building of a new home, but there are instances where women played the rôle of client, and one imagines that they were less prone to quarrel with their architects than the women of to-day. Madame Du Barry had the enthusiastic vanity to demand a new style as a background for her career and as evidence of the prestige she had obtained, but it is certain that she relied on her personality to indicate the general character of the style she desired and had the innate sense to know that beyond that she must trust to the creators.

To choose as an example a famous courtesan living in a day when the utilitarian details of a dwelling were of the greatest simplicity and with unlimited wealth at her disposal may seem unfair, but, if it is impossible for the American housewife to be as casual as a king's mistress about the disposition of her pantry, she can, where aesthetic matters are concerned, learn a lesson in assurance from such a woman as Du Barry.

It seems a pity that so few women in America have been willing to gamble in this way on the talent of an architect, nor is it such a gamble when one remembers that they can so easily inform themselves about the calibre and character of any architect's work. Such confidence might well be worth while, for, even though the door of a bedroom closet might be found to open the wrong way, the lady who put up with such an error might at least find herself going down to posterity as the first mistress of some Westover or Monticello of the future.

ORNAMENTS FOR THE HAIR

should always appear perfectly natural and normal; they must be so much an integral part of the whole attire that their absence, rather than their presence, should be noticed. This is an important point.

At a large dinner-party, of which she was the charming hostess, the Vicomtesse de Noailles wore a pale blue and black lace Chanel dress and black gloves (which, in this case, looked right, because of the black accents on the dress.) And, firmly, wilfully placed on the side of her head were two short flat ostrich tips—one blue, one black—held by a square diamond brooch. Her hair was curled in many rolls, and, though so strongly modern and up to date, she gave to many of her guests the inward feeling and suggestion of a delicate miniature of the early nineteenth century when, after the endless Napoleonic wars, women also began to let their hair grow, curling it, and bedecking it with flowers, ribbons, turbans, or jewels. The Princesse Jean-Louis de Faucigny-Lucinge, at the Baronne Eugène de Rothschild's ball, came in a lovely white Lelong dress, a white camellia held by two diamond clips over her left ear in the dark roll of her smooth hair.

Many women slip a delicate multi-coloured jewelled brooch in among their curls instead of a flower over the ear. A fantaisie of this type was seen on a pretty dark head at the gala charity ball of "Les Amis de La France." Madame Alfred Fabre-Luce is another charming Parisienne who fastens a jewelled flower low behind one ear, catching back her curls. The Marquise de Polignac wears a diamond pin at the right corner of her forehead, in the depth of her black waves. At the Ambassadeurs, a smart Parisienne placed a very narrow bandeau of diamonds high above her brow, fastening it at the back between two thick, curled rolls. All this novelty, when handled with discretion and perfect taste, is the right answer to the modern woman's growing desire for elegance, personality, and feminine charm.

MIST OF A HUNTING MORNING"

"Even as a youngster she took all the hardest fences. And do you remember how hurt she was when we rode point to point without her? She's as keen as ever—grown up to be a beauty too. . . . *One Soap,

hold the secret of the English Woman's fine
Complexion*

IN HER active, strenuous life, the English woman of position has no time for the elaborate beauty ritual. Simplicity, above all, must be the keynote of her cosmetic rites. Yet, through sensible daily care of her skin she has achieved a reputation for the loveliest complexion in the world.

Three famous toiletries comprise her only treatment: Yardley's English Lavender Soap, Yardley's English Complexion Cream, and Yardley's English Lavender Face Powder. And now they may all be yours. First comes the soap, with its generous, mild lather—a stimulating shampoo for your face and neck. Then the cream, to complete the cleansing. It will loosen all imbedded impurities and lift them gently to the surface. Wipe the accumulation away with a pad moistened first in water and then in astringent (Yardley's Cleansing Lotion is excellent). A second layer of English Complexion Cream is left on all night, to nourish and refresh the skin.

In the morning, use English Complexion Cream as a powder base. Smooth on a liberal coat, allowing the skin to absorb as much as it will. Wash off the surplus in water, with an ordinary face cloth; a thin, invisible film remains, to which Yardley's English Lavender Face Powder will cling for hours. AMUSING WINDOWS employed by Jones and Erwin to aid in this deception—an idea used first in France—which is to place slanted strips of sanded glass horizontally across the opening, letting in light and air and obstructing vision most effectively.

Of course, those who have houses decorated in a more traditional spirit will not be so much interested in all this. Their needs are entirely different. And yet, even in the conventional interior, modern artistic theories differ very appreciably from those of the past. Count Di Zoppola brings out the fact that a too lavish use of colour and material destroys the balance of the room—a balance that can be maintained only by subordinating the curtains to the decorating scheme as a whole. He often uses lined curtains in which two colours are combined: a rather cold, light colour on the outside and a lining in a richer, warmer shade. Thus, the light, striking through the outer transparency, gives the whole a deep glow that changes according to the shifting mood of the day.

CURTAINS AND MATERIALS

For a big studio window with a view, one very wide curtain, of heavy silk or of gaudy turkey-red or red-and-white striped cotton, can sweep across in a deep swirl, dripping with a wide ruffle of the same fabric. This one-sided effect is very smart with either the very modern or the very ancient. If a window looks down upon the city, paint the cross-bars dull black so that the night view will not be chequered. All-white satin curtains, extravagant and impractical though they may seem, are lovely, falling simply and classically and trailing a foot on the floor in a lustrous pool. Green damask, draped over long gold arrows for poles, have a nice early nineteenth century feeling.

In this military breakfast room decorated by Bruce Buttfeld, red-and-white hangings are used, with old Victorian shutters

Victorian windows are very much the thing. Bruce Buttfeld uses white organdie with fringes of pearl beads. Jones and Erwin use white serge. Old Nottingham lace curtains are being pulled from the attics and hoisted, freshly white and starched, to mahogany mouldings once more. The Victorian fiends are getting artist friends to paint dados of cardboard drapery, red with yellow-ball fringe, like Punch and Judy scenery, and these are used with simple roller shades painted with gold moulding lines. One continuous strip of material, draped over a white pole with a big loop for a valance, is another Victorian notion much in evidence. Joseph Urban has used the idea in his riot of modern decoration in the gay new Atlantic Beach Club, on Long Island.

WINDOW ARRANGEMENTS

In an attractive window designed by The Closet Shop, conventional lines are varied by means of a square valance board to which the curtains are tacked in a curved line, sloping towards the sides and giving the effect of an arched window. One of the best simple arrangements at this shop includes curtains of a figured material with a wooden valance board, in the same tones, on which the motifs of the fabric have been painted. Valances of draped cords are excellent, and these are used in the window by Diane Tate and Marian Hall, on page 87. Bruce Buttfeld uses painted glass valances.

Casement curtains are on the wane in town. Very often, you live so high in the air that they are not necessary for privacy. If there is a lake or a mountain in the offing, they are beginning to be considered a crime. Chiffon, net, organdie, voile, or lace are the best materials when they do exist. AMUSING WINDOWS are ubiquitous lately, but roller shades appear, too—hand-painted, perhaps with stylized floral decorations or conventional designs. Some of Bruce Butterfield's shades are in dead-white with fringe or lace trimming, and he uses, also, Venetian blinds, painted in horizontal stripes, in two tones. The Closet Shop makes colourful roller shades of chintz, which they cover with a curtain of delicate lace, net, or chiffon—a simple and charming effect that eliminates any feeling of bulk. Another novel idea originating with this shop is to use a plain roller shade with a small motif from the wall-paper of the room applied to the centre of the border. Count Mario Di Zoppola sometimes conceals roller blinds in a box built into the top of the window-frame, so that they are invisible when not used.

ON THE SUBJECT OF CHINTZ

Chintz is an extensive and complicated subject, even if one doesn't consider the beautiful and valuable old chintzes that are as rare and ardently bid for as any other art form. Modern chintzes are developing new beauty every year, and every year more is learned about utilizing them skilfully. However, various warnings should be sounded in the ears of the novice, and particularly the novice who is endeavouring to decorate on a limited amount of money.

At the Chintz Shop, you will be told that to use cheap fabrics is the poorest sort of economy, for they simply do not keep their colour, and the work must be repeated almost before it is off your mind in the first place. A good sun-fast chintz, which may be obtained for about two or three dollars a yard, will last three or four years, under any conditions, and may last a great deal longer if good care is taken of it. If it is necessary to save money, it is wiser to use only net or voile casement curtains at some windows and put the greater part of one's available funds in good chintz for a few. Not every one knows how easy it is to have chintz cleaned and re-glazed, which, of course, lengthens its span of life considerably. Frederick Wachter, in New York, does this work with great success.

Particularly charming for a bedroom or dressing-room is this window arrangement: rose gauze curtains and shades painted in a hollyhock design; The Closet Shop

AT THE CHINTZ SHOP

Some of the best new curtains made by the Chintz Shop are of figured chintz with bindings in three graduated tones of the colour that is dominant in the design. Also, this shop makes borders of plain glazed chintz and—a rather new note—of ruffles of the same chintz as the curtain. For country houses, the same shop makes fascinating tie-backs of old glass bridle buttons, saved from the limbo of discarded objects. It is unfortunate that these are very hard to find, because nothing could be smarter for an informal interior. These have small designs under the glass, and the sport-lover will be particularly watchful for those with horses.

THE KEY-NOTE

Naturally, the fabric used is determined by the atmosphere and purpose of the room: dignified patterns with a subtle colour harmony for the city house; gay, impertinent ones for the country; conventional designs in masculine colours for the man's room or library; and delicate, charming ones for the nursery. Here, as everywhere else, suitability is always the key-note.

THE LINCOLN

THE WILLOUGHBY LIMOUSINE

A notable and inspiring possession

THE passing of a Lincoln anywhere, on shadowed asphalt or sun-swept country road, is a smoothly beautiful event. For this motor car, even in the moment in which it flashes by, wears surely its own characteristic air of mechanical fitness and clean grace.

And this impression which the Lincoln creates is a fair symbol of the motoring excellence it brings to those who own it. Its effortless power and style, its safety and luxury, find an accepted place in the routine of their days, and lend an added grace to their comings and goings.

The deep satisfaction of owning a Lincoln is the natural result of the sound engineering skill and experience which go into its making. Built with unhurried craftsmanship in one of the famous precision plants of the world, its enduring stamina and smooth power are assured. And it is, from the first to the last of as many miles as you choose to drive it, an inspiring possession . . . "as nearly perfect a motor car as it is possible to produce" . . . the Lincoln.

Lincoln motor cars can be purchased for as little as $4200, f. o. b. Detroit. This price includes full equipment.

with leather and buckled in either brass or nickel. You can have it made in various cloths and leathers and colours that the sales girls will show you, or you may bring in a piece of your dearest tweed coat and have one made out of that. It costs, as I live and breathe, less than seven dollars. Then, as a final touch, you can get a gold and crystal clip with your monogram submerged in it, like those horses' and foxes' head riding-links, and if that doesn't give you a rush of chic to the head, you're hopeless.

In this same Accessory Shop, there is a new, overwhelmingly complete monogramming service. Pick your monogram and have it done in gilt for a bag, and then have the same monogram embroidered on your blouses, handkerchiefs, belts, scarfs, berets, and what you will until you are alive with monograms, if you have the same urge for exhibiting your own initials that I have.

There are, also, a lot of intoxicating evening bags made of velvet in the tones people will call "jewel," to match your evening dress, and oh, how alluring, how very smooth, how beautiful!

• Then on, with more shouts, to Stern's, where they have a girdle that is an exact copy of a Cadolle model, made by a former associate of his, for under thirteen dollars; you get peach coloured cotton elastic, none of this candy-pink sandpaper, and a lovely shape for what some lunches à deux in this orchidaceous city have been known to cost.

Next, to moor the corset, they have faggoted ingrain silk stockings (all-over stripes of open work faggoting), which absolutely pass outside the picket fence of my adjectival capacity. Anyway, your ankles look about an inch slenderer plus them than minus them.

Then, they have some hand-made silk underclothes to put on top of the now well-known-to-you girdle; they are simple and yet pretty smooth, but it is the monograms available to put on them that induce the real hysteria; they are without doubt the most thorough glorification of your own initials that ever swelled your vanity. The two best are in lower case, which means the opposite of capitals, one printed by somebody very artistic and the other written in a sort of French angular hand. We have also ferreted out a fact that ought to charm all you dwellers against the sky. Stern's has dies of all the bigger and more Hispano-Suiza apartment-house addresses, so you can have your paper engraved without waiting around for a die to be made. And I may add that their paper has great cachet.

• If you are going Europe-wards and want something to put your clothes in, or at least bring them back in, you should hie you to Abercrombie and Fitch's and take several looks at a new kind of Hartmann luggage called "Debonair," which is made of a remarkable substance called Cossack linen; they tell me Cossack linen has to lie around on the Swiss mountains in the morning sun and the evening dew for weeks and weeks to get the intoxicating off-white colour it has when we bloated bond-holders purchase it. The weaving and bleaching have to be done in summer, too; winter just doesn't work. Anyway, at Abercrombie's, it has acquired coloured patent-leather corners, which have undeniable charm, and even a patent-leather stripe, green or red or brown or black, across the top, if you want it. It has very well-bred moire linings and is made in a big suitcase size, a small size, and a hat-box. Air-minded ladies ought to take quite a sneaker for it, because it weighs nothing, in luggage parlance. With a set of this distinctly aristocratic baggage, you ought to feel pretty debonair yourself.

• Of course, if you want to be really alluring and like a heroine in a novel published by Knopf, you ought to buy certain articles of your apparel at a real man's shop like Brooks Brothers. For instance, a man's dressing-gown, made of heavy silk, in various colours, has a certain charm that nothing outside a lithe, lean lady in Michael Arlen can approach. Men's pyjamas, too, make you look tall and esoteric, and with a private life of your own. The whole point is to get man's, not mannish things.

For hunting, if you are a fox-chasing female, it is really necessary to get certain things at Brooks. For example, turtle-necked sweaters for cubbing; wind-proof chamois shirts; bowlers and toppers; woollen socks to wear under black boots on a cold November morning; and yellow or white string gloves, some of them with woollen linings. This shop has one thing that is a real godsend to ladies with tender necks, which is a stock made of a material called taffeta flannel, soft, creamy, and correct, and has it all over scratchy piqué and crumple crêpe de Chine.

• There is nothing more thoroughly satisfactory than the opening of a new department by a shop that has always been good at something else. I thrill at the enlargement of genius. Mrs. Franklin's, which has always had superb sports clothes, has now burst into flower with a pyjama shop—and what Hispano-Suiza pyjamas, what long-lissom-legs pyjamas! I looked at a pair made of a Rodier cotton-and-rayon tweed-like material in a delicious dust colour, with a blouse of red-and-white candy-striped crêpe de Chine. The trousers have deep pleats, both back and front, giving the effect of a beautifully tailored skirt. A jacket of the Rodier material goes on top casually. This has great sophistication and wham. There is a large hat of candy-striped crêpe de Chine, also.

Another pair, made of a mysterious material with a frosty, cool feeling, in a dull raspberry colour with white zigzag lines has a one-piece body with the back of the trousers in fish-tail effect. The same effect is carried out in the jacket, which is fitted. This is a grand costume, compatible with possible hauteur, and yet a possible game of craps on the floor—both.

But you must see the evening pyjamas in heavy dull black crêpe made like an evening dress with a low, square neck, back and front, and pleated trousers, all this being black as the night, and over it a short hip-length jacket that fastens under the arm, made of an intoxicating material—a white suède-like satin.

• Dear Woolworth's! How should we all keep the home candles burning without you? Now, this emporium has some bracelets that are really and truly about the smartest of the big conspicuous sort of bracelet I have seen. They are like coils of transparent celluloid, in green, which has great swish with a black street dress, and pink, which is no less than divine in the evening, very iridescent and opalescent and evanescent and so on. They belong on lovely young things with long slender arms and thin hands making immature gestures. Anyway, they are really good stuff; when I get around to it, (Continued on page 138)

"Sleep under the North Star"

© 1930—N. S. W. M. Co. . . . Interior Decorations: Courtesy, Nancy McClelland, Inc.

NORTH STAR BLANKETS fit into any setting, for they are kin of all the lovely things genius creates. Clean and wholesome as the morning wind over the waters, light and warm as eider-down, colorful as flowers in a garden close, they awaken memories of the days of lace and lavender and gentility. Yet, too, they are as new as the flush of tomorrow's dawn, and of a perennial beauty; for their exquisite purity and fineness keep them thus year after year—treasured possessions. Whether in the purest of white, or in any of the delicate pastel tones, North Star Blankets meet the needs of every woman who seeks in her bedroom or boudoir perfect repose for the eye and the body. The price range provides a North Star for nearly every budget limitation. And each is a pure wool blanket of immaculate purity and enduring beauty.

Sizes—(Single and double) from smallest crib, 32"x42", to extra large, 90"x108".

Colors—Loveliest of the pastels, duotones, two tones, plaids and solids.

Whites—The whitest of whites, plain or bordered.

Purity—Absolute, both as to wool and dyes.

Weights—All, from lightest summer to heaviest winter.

How to Buy—Insist on blankets with North Star Label.

the bantam Austin... a thrifty mate for cars that squander gasoline!

It comes darting down the American highway, with a trail of triumph across the old world...
medals and cups galore... over five hundred of them in its eight years of continental glory.

It brings a new idea of transportation to us... a sensible, inexpensive way to go places. 40 miles on a gallon of gas... 20,000 to 40,000 miles on a set of tires... cost $\frac{3}{4}$ of a penny a mile for gas, oil and tires. It will run you a thousand miles for \$5.75 worth of gas and oil.
It relieves your large car of all the one and two-passenger journeys. The family garage bills become almost painless.

It carries two people with amazing comfort... plenty of leg-room... even for six-footers.

Its smart, graceful contour comes from the drawing board of an internationally known designer with five coveted Monte Carlo Automobile Club medals to his credit.

More facts... fifty miles an hour in high... forty miles an hour in second... wheel-base—75 in... width—40 in... There's a trim young roadster, too.

Showing now... Go, slip behind the wheel... drive it in traffic... park it... and you'll be about ready to part with $445, plus freightage from the factory.

WEDGWOOD

Prairie Flowers

IN this new pattern—in bone china—has been produced the first Wedgwood design from an entirely American inspiration. ✕✕ For its creation, the artist traveled to the West to see one of America's glories—the wild flowers of the plains and prairies in the early Spring. ✕✕ Here, indeed, he found a new enchantment, scarcely to be equalled in the whole world;

this he has happily symbolized in Wedgwood's latest design—Prairie Flowers.

Upon request we shall be pleased to send you a copy of our illustrated booklet.

THE FUR JACKET COSTUME

FASHION'S FALL FORMULA

This is the Bruck-Weiss choice of the smartest costume for Fall. As illustrated, it consists of a beautifully tailored, black woollen dress, belted at the natural waistline by a soft band of fur, to match the galyak jacket, which is cut on bolero lines in the new Vionnet manner. The hat is a distinctive Bruck-Weiss origination . . . a black velvet beret, draped long at the right side and fitted becomingly to a tight bandeau of galyak fur the client to get up and move about as she pleases any time during the waving process; another in which the hair is waved from the ends, in croquignole fashion, and which permits the heat to escape from both ends of the little heaters, thus minimizing the possible discomfort of heat and stretched hair. Here is a drying machine that sheds both light and heat upon the head, thus effecting a shortening of the drying period. Here, too, hair is permanently waved in smooth, flat waves or in little ringlets according to the type of coiffure that the client wishes to adopt, and reworking the hair in the space that has grown out straight since the last permanent wave was acquired is made a feature. This item, incidentally, is of no small importance at this particular time of year, when the wave acquired at the beginning of the summer has a way of looking very uncurled on top, even when the ends are still curled.

Tradition is an admirable thing in any commodity, and Atkinsons's soaps, which are now being introduced in this country, bring with them not only the splendid background that English soaps have created for themselves, but also the tradition of a house that has been established since 1799. These soaps, delightful and fresh in their perfume, finely milled, and effective in colouring, have been made for American use in sizes for the hand, the bath, and the guest bathroom, in a variety of well-chosen fragrances, which include rose geranium, English violet, eau de Cologne, vervain, lavender, and jasmin. One excellent feature for the person who is buying these soaps is the fact that their cellophane wrappings are all perforated, so that you are able to tell exactly what fragrance you are securing.

In this series, there are also bath

Atkinsons's soaps, shown above, have English lavender fragrance, one of many delightful perfumes in which they are made. The eau de Cologne and lavender water are charmingly bottled; Altman fragrances in soluble cakes that are a delight to use, eau de Cologne and lavender water in charming bottles (which are shown in the photograph above), a wooden bowl of soap for bath or shaving, a white rose perfume, which has already won favour among those who like a rose scent, and "California Poppy," a piquant and individual fragrance. Atkinsons's soaps and other preparations are available at the toilet-goods counters in a number of leading department shops in larger cities.

The tendency, to-day, among the better cosmetics is towards specialization, and the Amiran products, those delightful preparations made according to the formulae that have long been used to create the beauty aids of the women of the imperial house of Russia, are an outstanding example of this trend. The complexion soaps are numbered one, two, and three and are intended for dry, normal, and oily skins. The skin food is made in two different forms, one for the average skin and the second, containing a greater oil content, for the dry skin. The astringent is available in two strengths, one for daily use on the average skin, the other for the relaxed skin that needs more active stimulation. The liquid protection cream in this series is a smooth, milky liquid that not only affords protection to the face and arms against the elements, but also softens the skin and provides a most satisfactory powder base, while the cleansing cream is of the fine, supple texture that requires only the lightest touch in applying and removing it. All of the preparations have a fresh, faintly lemony fragrance that is very pleasing, and their gold and black containers are distinctively chic. The Amiran products can be purchased at Bergdorf Goodman in New York.

I shall write a theme song about Woolworth's.

• On a little-known thoroughfare called Fifty-First Street, between Second and Third Avenues, there exists Leslie Van Dusen's, a modest little shop with a large sign saying "$5 and $10 Antiques." And it's good. It's simply superb. For instance, nine Wedgwood plates with engravings of the capitol at Washington, positively antediluvian as to age. I saw some wonderful old glass, I think it was Sandwich, but I wouldn't know, and a mellow old teapot, with one tiny chip off it, that was Lowestoft. There are red and green price-tags, green for the ten-dollar things and red for the five, for such of us simple-minded souls who can't read.

They will talk of the chase as far as the elms, where the horses drink, and where his margin of honours for the day will take a little tumble.

HAND-WOVEN covers

so Exquisite in their weaving and colors, you'll seek many uses for their loveliness

Imagine the most enchanting colors you've ever seen, rainbow-like in their delicacy and variety—think of such color in woolens of a dreamy softness and airy lightness—and you can begin to understand the unique charm of Churchill Hand-Woven Covers. A "miracle of beauty" is being created by weavers in Kentucky, whose native craft has been enriched by the skill and art of India, transmitted through the genius of David Carroll Churchill.

You can enjoy this rare beauty in Couch Throws for the boudoir chaise or the living-room sofa; in luxurious "extra" blankets that you'll like to display; in motor robes to match the car's upholstery. In fact, you will create opportunities to use covers which so splendidly combine comfort with decorativeness. There are baby blankets, too, whose softness and daintiness you'll love. Churchill Covers are practical; made of the finest, selected all-wool yarns, they can be laundered repeatedly without injury.

Churchill Covers are rapidly being introduced in leading department stores, specialty and gift shops. Ask to see them—but let us send you illustrated booklet showing these items in their amazingly beautiful, natural colors.

shape of a monogram embroidered in gold or silver just inside.

The little fur jacket? Fun, of course, to wear and going to be terribly popular this winter, though not quite so useful for real winter as a long fur coat. The new feeling of being bulky at the top and slim and slender below is one of the smartest of the new sensations. Every jacket is sold with a skirt of cloth made to go with it—contrasting or not, as you prefer. Some of the jackets are so short that you can see the belt of your dress beneath. There is one type that is part of the light-weight wool cloth coat and worn right on top of it. The majority are hip length, belted or unbelted, with belts of cloth or fur, some few buttoned straight and snug up to a little round collar, others finished off with a Chinese neck-line that is very Oriental and becoming. The Paris Openings introduced others three-quarters in length, as well as tweed hip-length jackets lined with dyed squirrel. These short jackets are the very thing for novelty and for less expensive furs. In addition to black broadtail, galiak, Persian lamb, and pony for the city, there are tougher jackets of nutria, astrakhan, shaved goat, or lapin, lined with wool shantung, checked wools, Rodier novelties, or with sober linings, flaming as to scarf. A moleskin jacket will be worn with a bright orange wool scarf, tucked cravat fashion in at the neck; a nutria jacket with an oatmeal tweed dress and a scarf in yellow and black check. Even smarter than the jacket is the little cape of Russian sable, if you can afford it; otherwise, of tipped Russian sable, rather Victorian in a way, and very elegant worn over a velvet afternoon dress.

FOR SPORTS

The sports coat? Here, there has been a change. If you ask for one this year, at a good furrier's, you will no longer be shown a straight, belted model made of cheap fur. You will either get one of the doggie short fur jackets aforementioned, to wear on week-end tramps across country, to the Belmont Park races, or else you will treat yourself to a mammoth fur greatcoat cut with raglan sleeves, of nutria, caracal, beaver, maple goat, or dark lapin. This is the all-year-round fur coat. This is the coat-to-be-left-in-the-car, the coat that you wear out to dinner if you live in the country and have to motor through drifts, the coat that lies in your steamer chair while you take a turn about the deck. Leather coats lined with fur also are about and still very smart. At the Paris Openings, many three-quarters tweed coats were shown lined with dyed squirrel or flat furs.

You might also investigate coats ending between the hip and the knee for this purpose, for they are very smart with a good tweed showing beneath and a wool scarf muffling the neck.

EVENING FURS

For evening? Sable, of course, stands in a blaze of glory at the top. The new ermine, dazzling white and supple as white velvet, is handled with consummate skill, slightly fitted, slightly princess, and you have your choice of the little hip length that has been such fun all summer, or the extremely long coat to cover the evening dress, slightly longer in back, or the new seven-eighths length. The last two take the palm for winter, what with traffic what it is and the cold wait for limousines being so long. White broadtail is the alternative for ermine, and a white broadtail dolman, glimpsed at a shop recently, has a great deal of charm and again suggests the Victorian and driving up to Buckingham in the 'Eighties in the brougham with all the harness chains jingling. If you want something really sensational—not a wrap for six-nights-out-in-a-week work—Worth's little short jacket wrap of silver fox with the silver reflections concentrated on the skins in the centre back is very smart. Again, the nice bushy feeling above to accent the suave silky form beneath.

FUR AND FABRIC

The fashion of combining fabric with fur and fur with fabric is an outstanding tendency of the new autumn mode in Paris, and a very important one, for it reflects again this entirely new method of handling fur. Just as cloth coats are encrusted with fur, so fur coats are often encrusted with cloth. Fabric and fur are used interchangeably. An astrakhan coat, for instance, may have broadcloth set in under the cuffs and behind the collar. A black seal coat belted with a leather belt may have, in place of a fur collar, a long, voluminous black wool scarf, which is, of course, infinitely more surprising and new. A young girl may wear a cloth coat with a circular grey squirrel cape on her shoulders or a tweed coat with a fitted astrakhan coachman's cape collar.

Separate furs? First, you might look at sable, two, four, or more skins. They will be very luxurious and lovely with these new velvet dresses that we are about to wear. Fishers are less expensive. A sort of Ascot of white ermine or white caracal or white broadtail, worn cravat-like about the neck like an old-fashioned groom's stock, is very smart with a black suit. These same furs are equally chic in black. For a novelty, a pierrot ruff of foxes' tails is amusing. This new muff is a small, square, flat object to match the coat, not quite so "rigolo" as the baby round muff of the past two seasons, but a little more dignified. We prophesy, with all this Victorianism in the air, that, before the winter is out, smart women will be pinning violets again on their muffs, and, for those who can get away with it, it will be terribly chic to stroll into a luncheon on a cold day, after you have laid your wrap aside, in a velvet dress with a big fox muff on your arm for décor.

What's wrong with last year's coat? Very likely, it is not long enough or short enough. It probably is just between the smart lengths. If it is a long coat, you should let it down so that it covers your street dress. Otherwise, frankly take it up so that it becomes a real seven-eighths length coat. It probably is too straight. Have it fitted slightly under the arm. Take off its fancy collar or, if it is self-trimmed, have the collar cut down a bit and have a smaller one put in its place. If it is really worn, and the furrier says he will have to add an untold number of skins, slash it up altogether and make a little fur jacket out of it, cut like an Eton jacket, a Chinese coat, or just a snug little coat with a wide leather belt. And all will be well.

The Bride's Note

Crane's Visiting Cards

As a debutante, her coming-out party was one of the most beautifully arranged in an entire crowded season. Now that her wedding approaches, the same good taste, apparent in every tiny detail, will lift it to the plane of weddings long remembered.

Choosing the invitations will be an adventure. So many fashions, and all so lovely! Perhaps Crane's very newest one is of Kid Finish Ivorette, in smaller size, with the offset panel. The engraving might be in Rue de la Paix, a new, vertically shaded letter. This invitation slips into the large, rectangular envelope without folding.

Visiting cards are much in use during the first weeks after an engagement is announced. This thoughtful girl has already reordered her own. Later, she will choose her new ones, both those with her name-to-be, and those which read "Mr. and Mrs. . . ." A thrill, that!

She will, indeed, have a complete little paper trousseau, as adequate for its needs as her real trousseau. There will be note paper for her acknowledgments—Crane's Bride's Notes are so friendly that the very envelopes seem to voice her thanks. Note paper with her new monogram, of course—one kind for her apartment in town and another for the country house. Then, note sheets for formal use, engraved with her crest. And mercy! Don't forget Crane's Ivory Informals. She'll probably use them oftener than anything else.

The quality of Crane's fine papers is unquestioned. Wherever the best stationery is sold, there you will find Crane's. Eaton, Crane & Pike Co., Pittsfield, Mass.

and navy-blue cardigans and small jersey turbans. The popular beret, strangely enough, not much in evidence. In the smaller boats, crazy rags—blue dungarees, pink polo shirts, and rakish blue caps.

The great yachts, like the Bakers' Viking, bearing down on Newport on Fridays and Saturdays with guests for the week-end from New York. The crowds of lovely young things on the beach complaining of the nuisance of growing hair when swimming, and going right on growing it. The epidemic of tournaments—golf, tennis, and what-have-you, one on the other's heels.

The waltzy music. At the subscription dances at the Clambake Club, the better half of Vincent Lopez playing divine and dreamy Merry Widow stuff till the dawn comes up. The Francis 'Taylors' dance for the polo players with Markel's orchestra and those amusing Happy Go Lucky Boys singing.

Diana Dodge's engagement and all the subsequent parties to celebrate the event. Rostand's Romanesque in Mrs. Moses Taylor's shrubbery.

The good and bad plays at the Casino, where grand old balls used to be given and where now every one takes a box on Tuesdays, the opening nights.

The backgammon fiends hurrying along with their own boards tucked under their arms. The sheer impossibility of getting a bridge game.

The morning stop at Schuyler Parsons's shop to chat about the news of the day and fall victim to his enchanting antiques.

The long, dripping earrings back again on ears. The white dresses decoratively set off with dark blue and red touches.

The tremendous contrasts—first an evening spent at a very grand party at a very grand house, the grounds and the gardens magnificently illuminated, footmen running hither, thither, and yon, an orchestra from New York playing, and then the next night a party at the famous foggy Clambake Club with a mist creeping in from the sea and tweed coats thrown over your evening clothes.

This is Vogue's panorama of Newport this summer of the Cup Races, to be run off in the cinema camera at triple speed so that the little figures run instead of walk and everything in the picture hurries; or to be played, if you will, by an orchestra con fuoco fortissimo prestissimo.

ROMANCE IN A HAT-BOX

crown may be a complete hat in itself, and what seems the fulness of a beret is a doubled brim that hides a crown. Brims, when they merit the name, are adjustable, short, uneven, supple, faced or doubled, adding roundness to the softness of the outline and the edges—for we have no hard edges this season. Brims never interfere with the soft, collapsible, rollable quality of a hat. The most formal hat can probably be tucked in a pocket and emerge as spick and span as from a band-box.

Even the classic lines of a tricorne are subdued into long, rolling curves, and width spreads generally at the sides only, starting high and well above the ears, not to interfere with winter furs, and often developing into soft, unequal points at the side. Crowns, always shallow, may be slightly pointed or even draped and shirred.

NEW VERSIONS OF FELT

Many factors contribute to this general impression of softness, chief among them being the materials of which the hats are made. Felt has undergone a complete transformation, lost its solidity, and taken on much of the character of fabric and of fur. Soft and sheer as broadcloth, it takes an expert to detect its lineage. It can be draped and twisted, without any effect of heaviness, folded back on itself to form a softly rolling doubled brim or one that puffs around the face. It can be gathered, shirred, pleated, ruffled, and still make a hat that is feather-weight and supple as a handkerchief. It is made also in long ribbon-like bands that can be wound around the head and twisted into looped ends, much to the milliner's delight. Vis-à-vis, a soft taupe surface with a felt back, and antelope, both very light and supple, are slightly sturdier versions of this family.

In spite of all the new virtues of felt, fabrics are too good a medium for us to lose. They are more prevalent than ever, this season, best in monotone weaves and in self-patterns. But, whatever their quality and their texture, they are smart only when in contrast to the costume. The use of one fabric for the whole ensemble, including the hat, gives a home-made look, as though mother's loving hands had been busy with left-over scraps. Besides, it is too easy a solution of our problem to be really chic.

First among the fabrics, velvet holds sway—plain velvet, stitched along the edges at Maria Guy's; with overcast edges at Reboux's; stitched all-over with a soft, raw, triple edge to its minute brim at Rose Descat's; quilted and braided at Patou's; draped, braided, and puckered at Rose Valois's; folded, seamed, and gored everywhere. Cut velvet, extremely smart, cut in small polka-dots at Patou's; in narrow corduroy-like ribs at J. Suzanne Talbot's, in a fine pattern of chevrons at Reboux's. Hatters' plush, thinner, with a long silkier surface, often in two thicknesses pasted together.

MILLINERY FANCIES

Agnès uses new hand-knit woollens that are slightly stiffened and shaped, rolled, and curved like felts. She clings to her bonnet shapes, curved back from the face, often giving them velvet ribbon streamers that knot or tie in bows under the chin. Loops of ribbon ending in bows fall from her small crushable velvet hats with their short brims that roll up all around the face. She rolls her double felt brims, too, and tops them with slightly pointed crowns, pierced by a jaunty quill. All-over stitching gives the trim outline necessary to an informal hat. Maria Guy uses jersey-like broadcloth for these simple hats with adjustable brims, combines speckled jersey and hatters' plush, most informally, and twists supple felt bands around the head to end in a very jaunty fan-shaped bow high on one side.

Marie-Alphonsine uses a new chenille, soft, light, and stocking-like in weave, that is manipulated as easily as fabric, yet has a certain resilience and a lovely glossy surface. She stiffens it by narrow bands of horsehair to stand out at the sides. Florence Walton and Marie-Christiane, too, use a new version of chenille with small astrakhan-like curls that really looks just like fur, but is much lighter in weight. Marie-Christiane uses it in grey combined with grey velvet, forming a large chou at one side. Florence Walton combines it in black and white for a Russian cap and a little scarf.

The use of two fabrics can be excellent. Patou uses strongly ribbed silk jersey braid and velvet for a little cap that extends in two side points, and Lewis makes the same type of hat with velvet and wide silk braid, the kind that tailors use. Lewis also drapes soft felt bands, turban fashion, around the head, and Madame Georgette likes these felt bands in their soft fuzzy taupe version. She uses melusine, a furry fabric with long angora hairs on a jersey foundation, that is an excellent fur substitute. Fur substitutes are rather more favoured than fur, this season, because they are lighter in weight and cooler. Fur itself, except for small ends and trimming, or as the completion of an accessory ensemble, does not appear at all, but ostrich tips peep out from Agnès' bonnets and Patou's supple tricornes, and quills pierce many a sports hat. Reboux binds back a velvet tricorne with velvet ribbon in a lighter shade. Reboux dearly loves ribbons, particularly in the new cut velvet, with their exclusive chevron pattern. Maria Guy, too, uses cut velvet ribbon, with narrow ribs. Marie-Alphonsine uses white grosgrain ribbon to join the sections of a dark green taupe hat.

A MODE OF GREAT VARIETY

The sound principles learned through years of great simplicity and plainness, when the slightest cut or curve could make or mar, still underlie the mode and give a sure foundation on which deft fingers can build in complication and fantasy without losing touch with the true lines and proportions of the head. So, trimming is an integral part of the hat, linking the whole together and often giving a colour accent. All this contributes to charm a lingering eye, for eyes linger on hats these days. The new models can not be taken in at a glance. Between the simplest of little stitched caps and the tilted brims and bows stretches a long vista of becoming shapes, undefinable and as variable as the minds of their wearers, charming hats for youth and for maturity.

Dark green, darkish vivid blues, deep wine-reds, and all the shades of brown, from deep dark brown to rust; turquoise and deep violet-blues, currant-reds, garnet, and ruby-reds, dark emerald-green, and black. These are the colours—rich and rather subdued, vivid and deep, colours for every complexion, for every shade of hair. Hats, this season, may be the colour accent of a darker costume.

NARROW watches, like any others, are of value only if they keep accurate time. A slender watch may be beautiful, but a slender watch, as Gruen makes it, is much more—it is a timepiece of remarkable accuracy as well.

Who should undertake to create such a slender baguette watch at moderate cost, but the world's foremost specialists in fine watches exclusively—Gruen! For the Guild has made many rare and costly baguette bracelet watches, especially for the world's most exclusive jewelry shops.

So, as a model for this new, moderately-priced baguette, Gruen selected the Guild movement shown above enlarged, which has a long record for unusual accuracy on the wrists of thousands of women.

Then—by an ingenious rearrangement of practically the same size parts, they achieved in this tiny movement of longer and narrower shape the same proved accuracy.

The result is an entirely new kind of wrist watch! A watch of long, gracefully slender shape,—yet accurate beyond even the Guild's highest expectations. The Gruen Baguette! The Gruen jeweler nearest you knows through professional experience that Gruen Guild Watches offer the highest value per dollar invested.

He will show you the new Gruen Baguettes pictured here and many other designs priced $85 to $3000. Or write for a free copy of the new leaflet, "The New Gruen Baguette," illustrating and describing many designs of this marvelous new wrist watch. THE TOURIST AT HOME IN ENGLAND

THE ENGLAND OF THE BRITON, WITH ITS DOWNS, HEATHS, AND HORSE-RACING, AWAITS THOSE WHO SEEK HOME TRAILS RATHER THAN TOURIST ROUTES

GUIDE-BOOKS, travel agencies, friends who have done it before, all conspire to send motorists in England over a few well-known routes. London to Winchester; Salisbury and Stonehenge; Exeter, Torquay, across Dartmoor to Tintagel and Clovelly; from Bath and Gloucester up the Wye Valley to Snowdonia and the castles of North Wales; Chester and the Lakes into Scotland, and back via Durham, York, and Lincoln (with Broadway, Oxford, the Shakspeare country and Sulgrave Manor somehow brought in). Round and round we go, until it would seem as if the tires of our cars must leave an imprint in those well-known roads as deep as the imprint that footsteps of the pilgrims have left in the stone floors of the cathedrals to which most of the roads lead.

Well, we have taken that tour. We have done our duty by the most famous cathedrals, castles, "American shrines." Now we are back in England again. One of the steamship companies has brought our car over, or Daimler hire is at our service. And, lovely as the familiar roads are, this time, let us make our headquarters at a comfortable hotel, choosing one in each of a few different districts and working out to the interesting and beautiful places in the neighbourhood. It is much less tiring than going on to a fresh stopping-place every night, and it saves the eternal daily packing and unpacking. The average of the roads is so good that you can safely take byways in and out of your centre so as to avoid duplication of the routes you may wish to cover. And when you have exhausted—or taken the cream off—one locality, it is always an easy jump, in a country so small as England, to move on to the next.

AND WE FARE FORTH

Try for a start, the Norfolk and Suffolk peninsula. Nature has made this a kind of cul-de-sac, so the endless chain of the first-time tourists passes it by. King's Lynn would make an excellent centre for your explorations, and it has two good country inns, the "Duke's Head" (a Trust House) and the "Globe." Lynn was once a flourishing port; now it is reduced to a pleasant quiescence, and the fine churches, customs house, and merchants' mansions built in its great era give the little place both character and beauty.

Near-by, in one direction, is the King's country place, Sandringham; in the other, the original Boston, with its unique lighthouse, church tower, and the Pilgrim Father memories if you care, for half a day, to be patriotic. The grand cathedrals of Norwich, Ely, and Peterborough are within easy range; at Wymondham and Bury St. Edmunds are abbeys romantically ruined; and Swaffham is a typical old English market-town, happily free from the attentions of modern commerce on the one hand and of the self-conscious, "arty" restorers on the other. (Bury St. Edmunds, by the way, would make a good alternative stopping place: accommodations at the "Angel" are simple, but the wine-cellar is unusually good for a provincial inn.)

HORSE IN FACT AND FANCY

It would be well if you could make your visit coincide with one of the ten race-meetings at near-by Newmarket. The "Guineas" meeting in the spring and the Cesarewitch and Cambridge meetings in the autumn are big occasions, but Newmarket always draws a good number of smart racegoers, and the town itself is interesting as the headquarters of that old British industry, horse-racing. And the great heath, with its tracks running through mysterious, prehistoric earthworks, is always dotted in the mornings with lovely thoroughbreds being exercised or put through trials. A few miles on is Cambridge, in case you haven't been there already, or in case—which is reasonable—you want to go again. In the other direction is the fine old town of Ipswich, with its famous "Great White Horse Inn," where an earlier tourist, Mr. Pickwick, so unfortunately broke into the bedroom of the lady with the curl-papers.

This East Anglian country is admittedly flat, but its northern parts are made interesting by the fens, which give this corner of England a very Dutch appearance. And southwards, in Suffolk and Essex, you get the real "old English" country near to London. You might come back to town by Colchester, full of Roman and mediaeval relics, with the fine fifteenth-century "Red Lion Inn," or else by Saffron-Walden, past Lord Howard de Walden's magnificent house at Audley End.

Or, forgetting London, you might take a leap (Continued on page 148)

JUST IMAGINE keeping all that gorgeous silver POLISHED!

★ ANOTHER of the season's debutantes has just embarked upon that mystic voyage. Guests are drifting to the treasure room, where the gifts of admiring friends and relatives are on display.

Whispered remarks! . . . Exclamations!

"Just imagine keeping all that gorgeous silver polished!"

But the modern bride is not over concerned with the problem of keeping her silver gleaming. For she knows that it's old-fashioned and unnecessary to worry about that old-time enemy of luster—TARNISH.

Each precious piece when left unused for any length of time will be wrapped in Staybrite No-Tarnish Tissue. Each will be kept as gleaming and as lustrous as on that day of days when it was so proudly displayed for the wedding guests. Sterling, plated ware, in fact any metal surface—including metal fabrics in shoes, hats and gowns—is kept entirely free of tarnish by Staybrite.

Staybrite is a chemically treated patented tissue. It has been used commercially for years by famous silver manufacturers to keep tarnish from their products. Now it is available at your local department store in convenient 50¢ rolls, twenty-four sheets to the roll. If your dealer is out of stock, we will be glad to take your order for our special 48 sheet package, price $1 prepaid.

THE TOURIST IN ENGLAND

through Grantham, Southwell (see the Minster), and the lovely remains of Sherwood Forest about the Dukeries, to the Derbyshire Peak country, extraordinarily little known to American tourists (though well known to the week-end char-à-banc trippers from the industrial cities of Manchester and Sheffield). It is a region of craggy hills, romantic caverns, rushing streams in lovely valleys. Here are the Duke of Devonshire's great mansion, "Chatsworth," and near-by "Haddon Hall." The latter is closed to visitors since the new Duke of Rutland has returned there, but the castle is easily seen from the road, and "Chatsworth House" is open on stated days and its great deer park every day. Don't be deterred by the intervening coal-field from driving over to see the remains of "Bolsover Castle," where the guardian will show you the gently declining Renaissance beauty that moved the Sitwells (whose ancestral home, by the way, is near at hand) to verse. You might stay at the "Peacock" at Rowsley, an exquisite old Jacobean house, or at the "Rutland Arms" at Bakewell, where the host is the perfect "mine host" of old English tradition, as respected by the great families who live about as he is respectful to them. Here is fine fishing; here are Bakewell tarts, rich confections that you should eat at once, after an otherwise simple meal. Or, if you want to dress for dinner and dance afterwards, there are a number of big hydros at the near-by spas of Buxton and Matlock.

DRIVE ON!

After another half-day journey, you can be up on the Yorkshire moors. You know York, so why not stay at Ilkley, a bracing little spa, or—if again you want sophistication and menus in French—at Harrogate? Or, perhaps best of all, at Ripon? Its cathedral is interesting, it is a town of quaint customs, and it is on the edge of the Marquess of Ripon's estate, where the park of Studley Royal, with its lovely water-gardens, its Jacobean dower-house, and the incomparable monastic ruins of Fountains Abbey, is open to the traveller. Almost any drive you could take on to the heather-covered moors would be delightful, but one drive should certainly be to Bolton Abbey, where the Duke of Devonshire's shooting-box overlooks the meadow in which the old church stands. And another should be along pretty Wensleydale, in the hope that you may find at an inn one of its exquisite cheeses in prime condition; though in neighbouring Airedale do not hope to pick up one of the terriers, for the race flourishes, apparently, all over the world except in its native place. A final day should take you up through West Tanfield, Masham, and Middleton to Richmond, one of the most picturesque of English castles. Thence you may go on to Scotland or hurry along the Great North Road.

SCORED AND UNDERScoreD

If from London you prefer to go west, we suggest the Marlborough Downs—rushed through by most tourists on the way to Bath—as a region worth loitering in. At Marlborough itself, the "Castle and Ball Inn" affords good accommodation and fare of the simple country style. It is a characteristic old coaching town with the wide, high street giving room for the teams to turn. The old "Castle Inn" here, built in the seventeenth century as a country mansion for the great family of Seymour, later became one of the most famous hostleries of England, but, with the coming of railways, the road traffic declined, and the stately building, first aristocratic residence, then posting inn, became the nucleus of the now famous Marlborough College. Now the automobile has brought prosperity back to Marlborough again, and to the "Castle's" successor, but rather as a port of call for a meal than as the resting-place for a day or two.

Just to the south of Marlborough is "Savernake Forest," seat of the Marquess of Ailesbury, where you can drive down beech avenues several miles long. Just to the north is White Horse Hill, where the grass of the slope facing the great plain (territory of the famous V. W. H. Hunt) is cut away over a vast area to leave the white chalk exposed in the shape of a formal, heraldic horse—work of some unknown people, done for some unknown purpose. From the poppy-covered mounds of the prehistoric camp at the top of the hill, you get a wonderful view over the coloured counties, and here the air is invigorating as it rarely is in England—which quality explains the presence of the numerous race-horse training establishments, where the thoroughbreds lend beauty and interest to Lambourn and the vicinity.

ANCIENT TOWNS AND MODERN BUNS

All this area was a great centre of population in pre-Roman times; everywhere on the Downs are barrows and tumuli, and a little west lies Avebury, an embowered village built among, and largely of, the monoliths of a druidic circle (its plan is still plainly discernible), which far exceeded Stonehenge in size and importance. Further on again, past "Bowood," seat of the Marquess of Lansdowne, is Westbury, with another prehistoric "White Horse." At Lacock, perhaps the least modernized of lovely English villages, is a sweet nunnery turned into a residence, with Tudor additions. The kind owner allows you to see it on Fridays. Thence it is but a step to Bradford-on-Avon, an ancient stone-built town, where industry, like that of King's Lynn and many of the Cotswold towns, has vanished, leaving fine edifices and spacious streets to a population one-tenth the size of what it once housed. This county is Wiltshire, famed for delicious bacon and ham. And so to Bath, for Roman and eighteenth-century civilization, for Bath buns and Bath Olivers—the latter, in these sybaritic days, offered also in chocolate coatings.

The Cotswolds have just been mentioned, and there is Broadway; but Broadway—contrary perhaps to the opinion of some tourists—is not all the Cotswolds, or even the best of them. Stancourt, near-by, is as pretty; Stanway, a mile on, has a Jacobean manor-house, a tithe barn, and a church, which form as fine a group of buildings of exquisite masonry and architecture as any in this country; but you must go on to Chipping-Campden for the best example, on any considerable scale, of Cotswold charm uncontaminated by sophistication. The "Noel Arms" there is a comfortable country hotel. Or you could stay at the "King's Head" in Cirencester (pronounced like that, or 'Sissister', or 'Sisseter', whichever you prefer), where they offer the old-fashioned, but jovial comfort that suits the followers of the Bathurst and Vale of the White Horse hunts. THE SCENIC DESIGNERS

BY DAVID CARB

ABOUT fifteen years ago, Granville Barker produced Shaw's "Androcles and the Lion" in New York. Because he considered the play too brief for a full evening's entertainment, he affixed—as what used to be called a curtain-raiser—"The Man Who Married a Dumb Wife," by Anatole France. To the amazement of the authorities, the memorable thing about that production turned out to be, not Shaw or Barker or France, but the scene that provided the background for the latter's charming trifle. Designed by a young man, unknown to the theatrical world, the morning after the première Robert Edmond Jones was the most talked about person along Broadway. He literally awoke to find himself famous.

Since that epoch-making evening, he has been the leading spirit of the only group of scenic designers in the American theatre that, as a group, is advanced and advancing, the only coterie with vision and the courage to follow that vision. He and his fellows have adopted enthusiastically the attitude expressed in Jones's words: "A scene should give the impression that distinguished minds and unusual imagination have been working on it." And the scenes created by our better designers in the past decade have seldom failed to give that impression.

In spite of being compelled to hold their imaginations within the confines of a mechanical, almost blunt theatre, they have managed to give an overtone to their product that stirs the fancy of the observer—causes him to feel that he has known well the room he is looking at, "not exactly the same, of course," he would add with an apologetic chuckle. "If the room I was familiar with had but had that touch or this which the room on the stage has." The scene invariably caused identification—a necessity in realism—but it is identification with a difference, a strange commingling of something one has actually known with something one has wanted to know. This is just another way of saying that these scene designers have created, under the strong lights that play upon our stages, photographic reality and, over and around and about it, the suggestion of something else—something rare, fine, provocatively intangible.

THE COMING ROMANTICISM

In a theatre that has for so long mistaken literalness for realism, our masters of décor have done more than any others to hold it on the path where it belongs. And now that we are approaching a sentimental era, leading inevitably to a romantic one, they will at last be able to abandon their cramped position, throw back their shoulders, inhale deeply, and release all the colourful, daring pictures the conditions of a decade or more have forced them to suppress. For, unlike most people who suppress their dreams over a long period, those of the scenic artists are not mildewed.

Jones, Norman Bel-Geddes, Lee Simonson, Jo Mielziner, Josef Urban, Cleon Throckmorton, Raymond Sovey, James Reynolds, Woodman Thompson—it is a list any theatre could well be proud of. No theatre anywhere in the world can match it or ever could.

In a sense, they have revived the old patronage system. The noblemen of another day were wont to bestow largesse on their artists and, in return, demand servile compliance. Our scenic artists do not adhere to that kind of patronage system; they are free, they earn what they receive—and, frequently, must bargain hard for it. No one management has the exclusive rights to their services, nor is any one in a position to dictate to them beyond awarding or withholding the job. From no angle can our magicians of line and light and colour and décor be regarded as handy men, catering to the whims of a superior. They have retained their independence.

But while each does the decorations for any play he chooses, irrespective of what producer happens to be sponsoring it, each one has drifted towards a producer whose taste and approach complement his own; each does practically all the plays for one particular management.

PRODUCER AND DESIGNER

The careers of Jones and Arthur Hopkins have been intertwined from the first. Simonson and the Theatre Guild. Urban and Ziegfeld. Throckmorton and the soi-disant experimental theatres—principally the Provincetown and Morley's Hoboken venture. Reynolds and the Neighborhood Playhouse. Mielziner does all the scenic work for Brady and Wiman, whatever the genre. Thompson and Winthrop Ames. Bel-Geddes is associated, more and more to the exclusion of all else, with the kind of pageantry that stems from "The Miracle"; a year or more ago, he gave up the theatre definitely and took to "industrial art"; last summer, he returned; he was engaged on a production of "Hamlet" in Skowhegan, Maine. And now his "Lysistrata" brings him definitely back into the ranks of scenic designers.

The manager seems more dependent on the scenic artist than the scenic artist on him, so, if any similarity to the ancient patronage system exists, it would appear that the artist does the patronizing. And he is well aware of the fact.

THE HEADQUARTERS

Any day, at any hour, one can verify that by strolling into the sometime stable, across from the Metropolitan Opera House in Thirty-Ninth Street, which Bob Bergman, the builder and painter, makes his headquarters. The steep, rickety stairs, at the end of a narrow, uneven passage, lead to a balcony that overlooks the lofty, unsealed workshop. There, one may observe the gleaming blue of the Bay of Naples flanked by the dingy wall of a tenement kitchen; a dug-out touching the lustrous greens and yellows of California's sun-bathed landscape; a bit of the old, leisurely Paris overlapping a fantastic outline of New York's dizzy towers. On the other side, the balcony leads into the cluttered room that serves as Berg's office. Many of the advanced stage designers use it for a headquarters. The cubby-hole up two more flights just under the roof, where Jones works, is a sort of inspirational centre. But the office is the rendezvous.

In that ramshackle enclosure are discussed casually, but thoroughly the finer problems of the visual part of the theatre. For every one who comes there is interested primarily in those finer problems and, though perhaps not consciously, feels fully the responsibility that interest entails. The discussions do not run to theories or generalizations; such words as "beauty," "art," "colourful"—words popular writers usually (Continued on page 152)

Amazing New Face Powder Formula

Brings A New Loveliness That Lasts for Hours . . . Protects Against Enlarged Pores and Roughening of the Skin . . . Ends Flaky "Cosmetic Look"

WHAT woman wouldn't be thrilled to learn of a powder which, so far from clogging and irritating the skin, actually soothes and improves its texture! That is what Boncilla has produced for you—the result of nearly three years' work by skin specialists and beauty experts. They have achieved a powder that not only clings for hours with rose-petal softness, but which works to heal the tiny irritated pores and smooth the skin itself. It protects against dirt and grime and, as it is daily used, acts to close the enlarged pores that mar complexion loveliness.

The process and formula of this lovely new powder are secret—but one of the steps of the process is air-floating through fine silk. One of the ingredients is a costly substance imported from Europe. Another makes this powder impervious to water and perspiration. That is one reason why this powder ends that flaky, pasty "cosmetic look" that is such a nuisance. Its perfume, too, is the finest produced by French parfumeurs.

Experience the thrill of using this delicate, expensively-scented powder that actually improves the skin with daily use. It is one of the eight preparations of the new Boncilla Mark—2 Line, which skin specialists and beauty experts worked for years to perfect. Their exquisite quality, their positive results in beautifying and lovely containers have swept them into instant vogue, the country over. You can obtain it from any department store—and at a sensible price. Get it today in its smart, modernistic jade-green enamel case. Ask for Boncilla Face Powder at any leading drug or department store.

Here's That New Way of Removing Arm and Leg Hair

+ + + So many women are asking about

Not only is slightest fear of coarsened re-growth banished but actual reappearance of hair is slowed amazingly.

A new discovery that not only removes hair instantly but delays its reappearance remarkably

A NEW way of removing arm and leg hair has been found that not only removes every vestige of hair instantly, but banishes the stimulated hair growth thousands of women are charging to less modern ways. A way that not only removes hair but does not foster its reappearance.

It is changing previous conceptions of cosmeticians about hair removing. Women are flocking to its use. The discovery of R. C. Lawry, noted beauty scientist, it is different from any other hair remover known.

WHAT IT IS

It is a fine toilet creme, resembling a superior beauty clay in texture. You simply spread it on where hair is to be removed. Then rinse off with water.

That is all. Every vestige of hair is gone; so completely that even by running your hand across the skin not the slightest trace of stubble can be felt.

And—the reappearance of that hair is delayed surprisingly.

When re-growth finally does come, it is utterly unlike the re-growth following old ways. You can feel the difference.

The skin is left soft as a child's. No skin roughness, no enlarged pores. You feel freer than probably ever before in your life of annoying hair growth.

WHERE TO OBTAIN

It is called NEET—a preparation long on the market, but recently changed in compounding to embody the new Lawry discovery.

It is on sale at practically all drug and department stores and in beauty parlors. In both $1 and 60c sizes. The $1 size contains 3 times the quantity of the 60c size.

The Most Important Thing SHE DOESN'T SEE

Ruinous, tell-tale moisture spots on a costly new frock, blighting a dainty atmosphere of feminine loveliness!

Every woman knows how quickly excessive perspiration can ruin a treasured garment—how suddenly it can defeat the lovely impression she hopes to make.

Ever-increasing thousands have found DEW the happy remedy. They prize it because they can use it at any time of day—even while dressing.

DEW will not irritate a sensitive skin or harm the most fragile dress when the simple directions are followed.

This crystal-pure deodorant and instant non-perspirant stops perspiration at once. It is colorless, unscented and offered in a beautiful, spill-proof dressing table flask. At all drug and department stores: 25 cents, 50 cents and large economy size $1.00.

put in the mouths of artists—are rarely, if ever, heard at Berg's. The talk runs to the particular play, what it is and what it might be, to the peculiar difficulties confronting the scenic artist on a certain job and how they were met and conquered; why the producer of a play that requires a set showing both banks of a river and a castle beyond should have booked it in a theatre the stage of which is only nineteen feet deep, why an intimate indoor drama should be placed on a huge stage, how large a part the electrician played in making an effect more than usually effective. The talk goes that way. But, as in the sets they create, what these men say—even the most technical things—has about it something beyond itself, an eagerness, a reaching out, a laughing earnestness—that which, in fancy phraseology, is grandly called "divine dissatisfaction." They are absorbed by the special problems of a specific assignment. No one of them would hesitate to boast of some of his achievements, and to qualify the boast quite as unhesitatingly. For each feels that he did the best work of which he was capable, at the time—which is not the best work of which he is capable at the moment of speaking. He has learned since the job was completed; he will always be learning. Although they have "temperament," their work is punctual, thorough, exact. They do not indulge in wildness. The ground plans for their scenes are as accurate in every detail as the blueprints of the most meticulous architect's clerk, their lighting and colour charts leave nothing at loose ends; they work untiringly with the builder, the painter, the electrician, the dressmaker, the upholsterer; they themselves do most of the shopping for their sets and costumes—matching stuffs, choosing bric-à-brac, furniture, pictures.

ARTISTS APPLAUDED

Tremendous enthusiasm and zeal, the zest, the quivering curiosity of youth, natural taste, talent, an ever-developing technique—it is such a combination of qualities that has brought these members of the United Scenic Artists—a labour union—to the preeminent position they hold in the contemporary American theatre.

For their position is preeminent and unique. No one writing for our stage holds the position that Pinero, Barrie, Fitch held in their day. (Pinero and Barrie wrote as directly for New York as for London.) Nor has any one appeared with the genius of Tchekov or the fine theatrical flair of the young Edward Sheldon. O'Neill once in a while. Shaw belongs to a special theatre. Owen Davis should, by all the rules, be the Pinero or at least the Henry Arthur Jones of today, but somehow he isn't—a Davis première makes scarcely a ripple in theatrical waters. Of all the hundreds of plays being written at present in America only the announcement of a new George Kaufman opus is regarded as a real event—he occupies a place somewhat similar to that of Clyde Fitch in his time.

TALENT IN ARREARS

The same is true of actors. Not even Ethel Barrymore stands out as John Drew, Maude Adams, Richard Mansfield, David Warfield, and a dozen other pre-War stars stood out. Lunt and Fontanne come nearest. John Barrymore was almost there when he forsook the theatre for the screen. Perhaps, Katharine Cornell would occupy the niche once held by Duse were she able to find parts that would give her talents full play. Alice Brady might be a sort of Bernhardt were she content to be the kind of actress she was intended to be. That, however, is all conjecture.

And no manager plays the rôle both in the public and the professional opinion that Charles Frohman played. Or Klaw and Erlanger in their heyday. Or Weber and Fields. Or Lester Wallack or Augustin Daly. Like Kaufman among the dramatists and Lunt and Fontanne among the actors, the Theatre Guild among the managers comes near to it—in a fashion. A sadly restricted fashion. By any standard of measurements, they seem undersized.

THE ADVERTISEMENT BOARDS

But the scenic designers tower above their predecessors. They have absorbed what Craig and Reinhardt had to teach and have gone far beyond their instructors. Their names mean much to the general public. Even the managers have been forced to admit it; the boards beside the entrance to the Plymouth now announce, in letters as large as those telling the names of author and director, "Settings by Robert Edmond Jones." The newspaper advertisements also. Ziegfeld recognizes the drawing power of Urban's name, the Guild of Simonson's, Brady and Wiman of Mielziner's.

The artists have discovered of late that scenic work does not absorb all their energy. Most of them have taken up "side-lines." Simonson has designed three art exhibitions, a piano, silks, and is now engaged in re-decorating Delmonico's. Reynolds indulges in murals. Urban's reputation as an architect and interior decorator grows constantly. Jones designs silks.

But their first work goes on and on. And grows as it goes. The creative group of scenic artists accept, without question, Jones's dictum that "a really good set is often a bitter, though unspoken criticism of the play." They strive to attain that. He himself achieves it in every set he makes—never more delightfully than in those he designed for the play whittled from the novel "Serena Blandish." They carried out his idea perfectly except in one respect: the criticism was not unspoken, quite the reverse; it was so vocal it disarmed other critics who deemed the dramatization poorly made, the acting in many instances wrong, the whole concoction considerably less than good entertainment. The critics mentioned the shortcomings of the piece and players mildly, and then launched into intemperate praise of the investiture. Which it richly deserved. Rarely is one privileged to see scenes—or pictures of any sort, for that matter—so satirically expressive. The Countess's drawing-room characterized her completely: a large, resplendent, but uncozy apartment, the bell-pull a trifle too wide, the draperies much too heavy, both in shade and in texture. And the room where Lord Ivor Cream passed most of his waking hours also described him even while it laughed at him and pitied him: the plenteous and luxurious heavy furniture all covered with a rich and very shiny material—it told his whole story.

THE TOURIST

Earl Bathurst's place, "Oakley Park," on the outskirts of the town, has an avenue even longer than that of "Savernake Forest." There is a huge Perpendicular church, a Roman amphitheatre, and roads running in all directions over the stone-walled wolds to sweet villages of grey mellowing to ochre, covered with mauve aubretia and white arabis, with magical names such as Bourlon-on-the-Waler, Stow-on-the-Wold, Birdlip, Fairford, Bibury (lunch at the "Swan Inn," off trout caught from the stream that runs through its lovely garden), Lechlade, Coln St. Aldwyn; or homelier ones, such as Swell and Slaughter and Moreton-in-the-Marsh.

In a tour spent like this, exploring a few neighbourhoods thoroughly, we tick off fewer cathedrals and starred items in Baedeker, but we see more of England. We miss the elaborate French cooking of the big hotels, but have time to seek out simple and delicious local foods and drinks—the ciders of Hereford and Somerset, the clotted cream of Devon, the milk-cheese and pig meat of Worcester, the pastries of Cornwall, the mead of Hampshire, the cakes of Shrewsbury, which Falstaff so appreciated (would there were space here to set you down at Shrewsbury or Ludlow and have you explore the Welsh Marches!), the pies of Melton-Mowbray, the pikelets of Yorkshire. We enjoy our holiday, not merely enjoy our sense of righteousness of having "done" so much—and been done up (if not done in) in the process.

THE DESIGNERS

undoubtedly due in large part to Jones's settings; no one who has seen the play will forget God's Office or the magnificent achievement in lights and costumes that made the march into the Promised Land breathlessly beautiful.

This small group of comparatively young men who imagine and execute the scenery that has kept the American theatre experimental, fresh, and crisp have none of the knitted-brow manner usually associated with important workers. They design scenery because that is what they want most to do, because they love doing it. Their product is suffused with that spirit. Vision, understanding, courage, jubilation make the mood of everything their hands touch. And they combine this fervour of the artist with the craftsman's skill in the use of his tools.

They believe in their medium, live in it. They are not concerned with how the manager or the public will take their product; they are too absorbed in expressing what they think should be expressed to consider those things. And, in that respect, it can not be said too often, they are unique among the present workers in the American theatre.

True, the dramatist's attitude must, of necessity, be different. A play does not exist until it reaches an audience; he must keep that audience and its reactions in mind as he writes. But the scenic designer receives the manuscript after all the arrangements are completed for exposing it to an audience; his task is to see that, pictorially, it conveys its story clearly and glamorously. This small group of enthusiastic artists do just that. They harness a fiery fancy to an expert craftsmanship, and the result is the most invigorating thing that has come to our theatre since the days of great acting.

A Courteous touch... for the Convenience of Those who Visit you

Placing a telephone at their disposal is as much a part of hospitality as flowers on the guest room table

MUCH of the charm of gracious hospitality lies in the little things you provide for the comfort and enjoyment of your guests. Fresh-cut flowers. Theater tickets. The latest novel. A breakfast tray. A guest room telephone for their personal use.

This last is a modern courtesy which adds the final note of convenience to the other arrangements you have made. It makes it possible for your guests to place outside calls whenever they want . . . or to receive them in the privacy of their own quarters. If your telephone system is intercommunicating, it enables them to talk with their host and hostess and various other members of the household.

The guest room telephone is a natural part of complete telephone convenience. In the modern home, telephones are placed wherever they will save steps and time and effort . . . in living room and sun parlor, kitchen and bedchambers, library and recreation room . . . and the cost is reasonable. In many residences, there is an additional line for servants' use. Your local Bell Company will gladly help you plan the telephone arrangements best suited to your home. Just call the Business Office.

A telephone in the guest room is evidence of the thought you have devoted to your guests' ease and comfort. Many hostesses find that in rooms where telephone service is desired only at intervals a portable telephone is suitable. This can be connected into a permanent outlet as long as the room is in use, and then moved elsewhere as household needs dictate.

Well-chosen books . . . a cozy lamp . . . a favorite chair . . . and, of course, a handy telephone, to give the living room its full measure of modern comfort.

An additional line for the use of servants may conveniently be installed, with extension telephones in the kitchen, butler's pantry, and service quarters.

The magic transformation of a Cinderella room

When Crane illustrations and new fixture designs first proved the possibilities of bathroom beauty, this room threw off shackles of unadorned usefulness and took its true place in charming homes. Every Crane suggestion since has added something to the transformation. For example, the room above, in English cottage style, introduces a new fixture... the Marshall bath... Another real service is the Crane Budget Plan, under which any home can have plumbing quality and pay in small monthly sums. To select materials, write for the book, Homes of Comfort. Your architect will help you plan. For installation, see a Crane Qualified Contractor-Dealer, always a registered or licensed master plumber or heating contractor.
